Area pact on sewer muddled

Stronger marriages than the one proposed between Valley Community Services District's sewage treatment plant and Pleasanton's Sunol facility have gone aground.

With the proposal accepted and the bands announced, it's only now that the dowry is being named. And the parents — VCSD directors and Pleasanton city council members — can't come to terms.

The dowry could be a whopper. As much as $4.5 million might have to be paid by Pleasanton property owners.

Essentially, the problem turns on VCSD's insistence that Pleasanton assume "contingent liability" in the district's pending suit with Dublin - San Ramon developers Volk - McLain.

Cost could hit $4.5 million in new taxes

Pleasanton adamantly refuses.

But the two have agreed on a state recommended $ $1.15 million initial "buy-in" cost for Pleasanton to connect to the VCSD plant.

The suit, on the other hand, is a legal nightmare.

VCSD filed against the developer asking Alameda County Superior Court for "declaratory relief." District directors want a 1961 agreement between VCSD and Volk - McLain upheld over a complicated 1965 agreement.

VCSD won in superior court, but the developer has appealed. It could wind up in the State Supreme Court on a finally tuned interpretation of the law because that type of contract was fairly common in the heyday 1960s developments.

The lower court said VCSD owes the developer a balance of $330,000.

Volk - McLain thinks not. Its attorneys say the purchase price is a function of connection charges.

The $145 hookup fee levied in the early 1960s was not large enough to cover the investment, they argue. They want the full $735 now charged, and they would like it for all past and future connections.

No hint of quakes along Lab faults

MENLO PARK (AP) — Several potentially active earthquake faults have been discovered in the Livermore area, U.S. Geological Survey geologists reported Friday.

The Las Positas fault zone is about nine miles long and runs from the San Antonio Reservoir area past the town of Livermore, the Lawrence Livermore Laboratory and the Sandia Laboratory to the Livermore oil field, said geologist Darrell Herd.

The Lawrence Livermore Laboratory is one of the nation's major nuclear research centers.

Herd emphasized that no evidence has been found that earthquakes are imminent along these faults.

He said the fault zone cuts across soil estimated to have formed during the last 40,000 years and may cut stream sediments thought to be less than 10,000 years old.

"Movement along the fault is believed to have occurred within the last 40,000 years and perhaps much more recently," Herd said.

He said a series of several dozen small earthquakes in 1943, including five of 4.0 or greater on the Richter scale, are among the largest quakes recorded in the Livermore area. But no definite relationship can be established between those quakes and the Las Positas fault zone, he added.

Herd said earthquakes of 4.0 magnitude seldom cause any serious damage.

The U.S. Department of the Interior considers as active a fault that has shown movement in the last 100,000 years.

Herd also studied in more detail the previously known Verona fault and Greenville fault zone.

He said the Verona fault, about six miles southwest of Livermore, runs northwest past Vallecitos Atomic Laboratory. He said it also is considered geologically young, but he found no evidence it has moved for at least the past 40,000 years along its mapped length of 4.4 miles.

The Greenville fault zone, which forms the eastern boundary of the Livermore Valley, shows no evidence of movement in the last 10,000 years, he said.

"Movement along Las Positas and Greenville fault zones is related in part to the recent uplifting of the mountains and hills east and south of Livermore Valley," Herd said.

"We don't know when the next earthquake might occur along any of these faults, but knowing that movement has occurred in the recent past and where the fault zones actually are can help us to be better prepared for the next quake."

Spirits up for bible 'jamboree'

LIVERMORE — Things are looking up at Pentecostal Bible College. Where only a few months ago talk was about the place closing down, now the happy chatter around campus is about the big upcoming PBC Jamboree next Saturday.

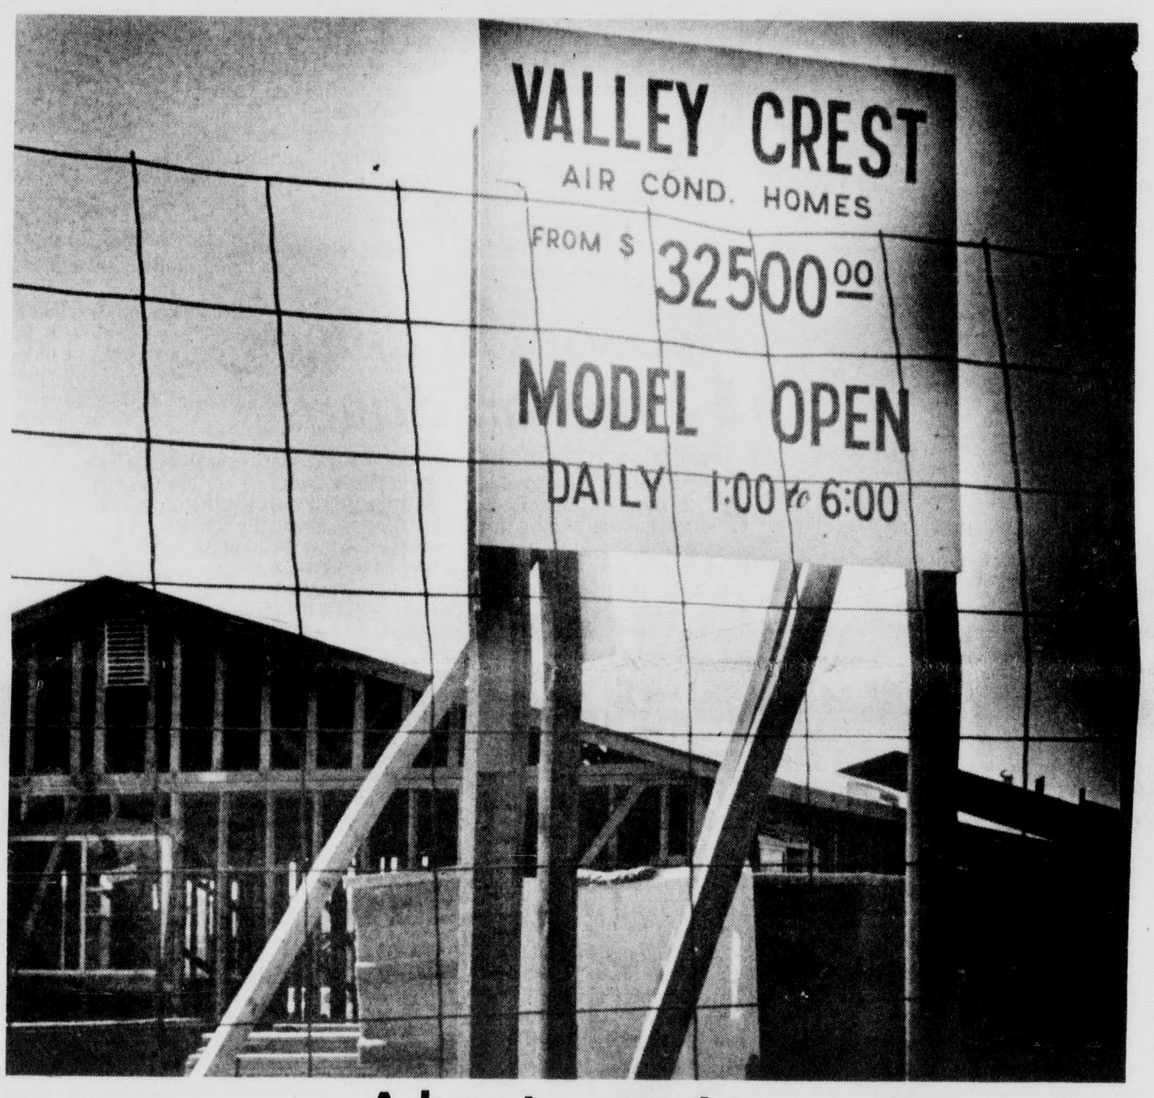
On Oct. 1, the small college will celebrate its 31st anniversary with recreation, games and special meals, according to the Rev. Richard F. Ingley, dean of academic affairs.

Special speaker at this jamboree will be Idabeth McDole, who was the first principal of the college. She now serves as editor of the "Pentecostal Messenger," the church's official publication, in Joplin, Mo.

Rev. Ingley said the fall semester started in late August and, with all the outreach programs of the college, they now number between 40 and 50 students. Students and staff alike have been working to beautifby the campus, first painting the classrooms and now working on the offices. Besides redecorating the buildings they are completing several unfinished special projects on campus, putting in new doors and completing new walls as well as adding trim work.

Rev. Ingley said the volunteer work has been aided by donation of more than 60 gallons of paint, "which we're working our way through right now."

The rennovation work will slow down this week before the jamboree for the annual campus revival which will be held at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday through Friday. Speacial speaker will be Dr. Elizabeth Williams, dean emeritus of Southern Bible College, Houston. The public is invited.



A lure to country

The flight to the suburbs continues. But in the current migration, residents are leaving Dublin, Livermore and Pleasanton and moving farther into the country, to Tracy and Manteca, for instance. The reasons vary. Housing, schools, rural charm, all may influence homeowners to pull up stakes. One thing's for sure, though, they're still moving.

Water mix is potable says EBMUD

OAKLAND — Although people guzzling the new water-mix being distributed by East Bay Municipal Utility District (EBMUD) call 30 to 40 times a day to say they notice the chlorine taste, none have complained about having any gastrointestinal disturbances.

David Vossbrink, EBMUp public information representative, said, so far, "don't drink the water" warnings don't apply to EBMUD customers as they do to travelers going to foreign shores.

"We've had no complaints yet about upset stomachs," he said.

Officials at the Family Medical Center in San Ramon and Alamo Medical Group said they had not noticed any rise in gastrointestinal complaints since EBMUD mixed their water with Delta water.

Last month EBMUD agreed to using a 10 per cent mix of Delta water in order to give their customers an additional supply.

"If the drought continues, we will need the additional water so we can keep our current rationing level," Vossbrink explained. "Of course, people will still have to cooperate with the rationing program as they have been."

Vossbrink said EBMUD had to step up the amount of chlorine to make the water safe drink.

Fair budget increased

Alameda County supervisors approved a $3.5 million budget for the county fair in fiscal 1978, an increase of $264,000 over the current year's budget.

E. County hub update

Alameda County supervisors kicked off their new study of where to locate the East County Government Center last week by authorizing consultants to update a previous report on the siting.

The county will spend no more than $5,000 for the update which will investigate sites on Hopyard Road in Pleasanton, San Ramon Road in Dublin, and the existing justice court building in Livermore in addition to the previously studied Santa Rita site.

Livermore school plan

Anti-vandalism fight spurred

Public agencies in Livermore have stepped up their campaign to fight vandalism in the city's schools, parks and on city property. At press conference Friday representatives of the Livermore Unified School District, the Livermore Area Recreation and Park District and the city released their cooperative report on the prevention of vandalism in the area.

Included in the report were recommendations for a reward program to encourage neighborhood and citizen participation. The school district has had a reward program in effect for some time but this would mark a new direction for the LARPD and the city. The consortium of agencies, according to the report, would jointly publicize rewards but the payment and size of the reward would be left to the agency involved.

The consortium report also recommended the authorities work together to require restitution or constructive service whenever possible.

"Since we think most vandalism is caused by young people, incarceration is not that attractive," said Ed Schilling who represented the city.

Surveillance and prevention were another major part of the report which recommended the agencies limit access to possible targets. The three representatives, Schilling, Rudy D'Ambra from the LVJUSD and Hal Adams from the LARPD, said they did not think this would cause problems for the general public.

"It's a conceptual problem butthe police tell us it's not an actual problem," said Schilling.

D'Ambra agreed and added, "We wanted some kind of tool to to keep gangs out but not someone jogging for his health or a baseball game."

D'Ambra also said the school district had stepped up its use of "vandal watchers," people living in trailers on the school sites. Three currently used at Mendenhall, Almond Avenue and Christensen schools would be joined by four new watchers at Arroyo Seco, Arroyo Mocho, Sunset East II and Rancho Las Positas schools.

Jail fire's torch tagged as suspect

PLEASANTON — A fire that caused $80,000 damage to barracks at Santa Rita Jail Sept. 16 was allegedly started by an inmate serving time on an arson conviction, a felony complaint charges.

Clifford D. Caton, 26, of West Pittsburg, serving a six-month sentence as a condition of three year's probation on an arson conviction, was alleged to have started the fire, an investigation by the sheriff's department purports to show.

One compound in the jail's medium security section was gutted and another sustained minor damage as a result of the fire. No injuries were reported.

Caton was convicted of setting a car afire in Castro Valley earlier this year.

Weathered barns find new meaning in shop designs

The weathered look of old barnwood is warming up the interiors of new Valley stores and tract homes these days, thanks to a Valley carpenter, Jim Van Ness, and an amateur carpenter, Ed Brush.

Van Ness's designs have been seen in Livermore and Pleasanton stores and soon he will begin work as a store interior designer for Dave Stevens Designs in Pleasanton. Ironically one of Van Ness's first jobs for Stevens will be to design 50 new barns — using new wood, which means it will be a kind of seed project for some future barnwood carpenter 50 years from now.

Brush, who teaches English at Granada High School, did much of the interior of fellow teacher Joyce Baker's home with barnwood. Times photographer Mike Macor captured the warmth of the wood.

Parents of students at Livermore's Jackson Avenue school marched in front of the district's education center Friday morning to continue their protest against the transfer of one teacher and the mixing of some grades in math and reading classes.

Teacher shift from Jackson stirs protest

Parents of Jackson Avenue school students picketed the Livermore education center Friday to continue their protest against what one called enrollment "mismanagement" by the school district.

Administrators and trustees of the Livermore Unified School District said last week the enrollment problem at the school, which found itself with 52 fewer students than projected last spring, had been solved and one teacher transfered to put the school on an equal footing with the rest of the district.

Parents had complained at board meetings Tuesday and Thursday nights the transfer and mixing of some reading and math classes was unnecessary.

Superintendent Leo Croce, citing the district's overall declining enrollment, clauses in the teachers' contract and the enrollment procedure adopted last spring, said the transfer was routine though he admitted understanding the parents' dissatisfaction.

He also defended the mixing of some math and reading students according to ability, noting it was done at other schools successfully and on a limited basis at Jackson last year.

Croce said, according to district policy, Jackson would be open to enrollment on a "space available" basis in two weeks after new classes were organized. The parents claimed the district failed to call all families on the waiting list for Jackson when the vacancies appeared on opening day. This, they said, caused the problem.

Jackson's principal, Don Larsen, said the faculty, though not entirely enthusiastic about the loss of one teacher and the mixed classes, was working to get the the classes prepared.

"I feel comfortable with the gains we've made (since Wednesday). The great thing that happened was the other six (teachers) said 'how can we help the two with mixed classes'," he said.

Chief of Naval Operations views hospital probe report

OAKLAND — Investigative findings on controversial deaths of a Dublin man and two other patients in June at Naval Regional Medical Center in Oakland are being reviewed by the Chief of Naval Operations, James L. Holloway III.

The Dublin man, Joaquin Miner, 78, died June 27 of coronary complications following a gall bladder operation, according to a hospital spokesman. His widow and two sons survive. He was a Navy veteran.

Dr. David Crane, a Navy Lieutenant, provoked the investigation. In writing, Crane charged that insufficient staffing, supplies and equipment at Naval Regional Medical Center jeopardized patients' lives at the hospital even before the three controversial deaths in June.

CNO Holloway requested the U.S. Navy Naval Inspector General, Rear Admiral Stanley J. Anderson, to conduct an investigation into the deaths. Adm. Anderson and his investigative team submitted their report to CNO Holloway Aug. 29, according to Naval Public Affairs Officer, Lieutenant Commander Dick Bennett.

Lt. Cmdr. Bennett said, "CNO Holloway will comment on investigative team findings and recommendations after his review and consideration."

Congressman Pete Stark, D-Oakland, also asked for the inquiry.

Details of the inquiry will not be released until the inquiry is completed, Adm. Anderson stated.

Miner's family has filed a $300,000 suit against the hospital charging his death was the fault of medical personnel there.

Potable SRV water but taste questioned

"Delta water has organic and suspended materials that EBMUD water does not have," he added.

Vossbrink pointed out that anyone objecting to the taste of chlorine can do two things. One is to let the water stand overnight in a jug; the other is to leave a container of water in the refrigerator until it is ice cold.

"The chlorine taste goes away when water is allowed to stand."

He advised owners of fish to not put tap water in the fish tanks. "Use only water that has been allowed to stand," he cautioned.

Vossbrink said some people were also complaining about the salty taste of the mixed water.

"They would have to have remarkable palates to detect any salt since it is so diluted."

The normal water source for EBMUD is the Mokelumne River. That river flows from the Mother Lode country out of the Sierra Nevada mountain range.

The Delta water source is the Middle River. Pumps located 25 miles west of Stockton help move the river water along.

Vossbrink said people had not let up on their rationing efforts.

"The ration ceiling for September is 145 million gallons per day. Our records show people have used 140 million gallons daily."

Pleasanton denies $2 million claims

PLEASANTON — City council unanimously denied a pair of $1 million damage claims filed by two pre-teen girls who claim they were almost raped last July after local police arrested the driver of a car in which they were riding and other passengers allegedly attacked them.

Councilman Frank Brandes, offering support for the "fine work" by the arresting officer, said the demand is "another example of absurd claims" that push up municipal insurance costs.

The suit says patrolman Bil Coble was "negligent" in leaving the 7- and 12-year-olds "in the care and custody of said persons who were of an irresponsible character and nature."

Coble arrested the driver for drunk driving and took him into custody.

He "should have known that (the girls were) being exposed to the unreasonable risk of danger of harm and injury," the claim charges.

It was filed late last month by Oakland attorney John R. Velasquez.

A criminal complaint was filed against the unnamed men who allegedly attacked the girls.

The attorney is asking for medical and hospital expenses and general damages for a total $1 million for each girl. He says the girls injuries "will result in some permanent disability."

By denying the claim, the city automatically turns it over its insurance agent.

Theatre owners seek flea mark

DUBLIN — John and Sal Enea, owners of the San Ramon Auto Movie Theatre, want to install a flea market at the ozone cinema.

They are scheduled to appear at 1:30 p.m. Oct. 5 before Alameda County Zoning Administrator Richard Flynn with the request for a permit to conduct the flea market.

Furniture sign fuss calms

PLEASANTON — City officials and the owner of The Woodwork, 8 the unfinished furniture store on Main Street, may have struck a bargain in the burgeoning sign flap.

Chris Kudriavsteff met with deputy city attorney Harvey Levine and planning director Bob Harris Friday morning after Levine threatened to file "criminal action" against The Woodwork's owner if he does not take down his sign.

But the two sides "may have worked something out," Levine said afterwards. "The potential is in the works."

Levine and Harris want Kudriavsteff to take down the sign and reapply to the city for an overall sign program. The controversial sign was ruled "awkward and unbalanced" by both planning commissioners and city council.

Kudriavsteff said he is "still waiting for word" from the two ."

Following normal procedures would leave him without a sign for about a month. He's willing to take it down for five days and have a design artist draw the building and would-be signs to scale for a fresh presentation to city planners.

The antiqued, bright white lettering is 14-inches high, and planners want it shaved to 10-inches. The city says the letters cannot be balanced with a similar ones for Colombus Realty, which occupies the other side of the parapet.

"It's a good thing I didn't call my place 'Al's'," Kudriavsteff quipped.

Harris said his office has "not yet decided exactly what tack we'll take." But he expects a solution soon. He's against the five-day application and the necessity for special design review meetings.

Sewer plant merger studied

The 1965 agreement also lays out a complicated interest formula that sounds like the perpetual motion of money. And all of it apparently would go to the developer.

When The Times first raised objections over the plant's fiscal liability to the community, developer Kenneth Volk personally assured the paper that the plant was structured such that it would never be in debt.

Now it looks as though it might never be out of debt.

VCSD's agrument with Pleasanton, then, is simple.

If the developer ultimately wins, the price of the plant will include the 6,000 sewer hookups Pleasanton will bring from its Sunol plant, plus any future connections the city makes.

"We don't think the people of Dublin and San Ramon should be stuck with that bill," explained VCSD General Manager Paul Ryan.

Nor is the court likely to set a cut off date for connection fees that would exclude Pleasanton's hookups. That's written into the 1965 contract.

Pleasanton, on the other hand, says the suit predates the city's involvement with the VCSD plant.

If VCSD as the unwitting groom played around before the Pleasanton betrothal, that's VCSD's problem. Pleasanton was not a party to that affair.

The city is not exactly under mandate to connect to the VCSD plant. But the state has said in no uncertain terms that the marriage is the most cost effective way of shutting down the elderly Sunol Boulevard facility.

But is it anymore, muse some Pleasanton officials.

It will cost the city $1.15 million to buy its way into VCSD, plus $547,000 to build a pipeline connecting the two plants.

Add to that the potential $4.5 million liability if the city becomes a party to the law suit, and some are asking if it's not time i to call off the wedding.

Pleasanton man improves following wharf explosion

SAN FRANCISCO — A Pleasanton man injured in last week's Fisherman's Wharf gas-line explosion was listed in "good condition" Friday afternoon, with the "possibility of being released" over the weekend.

Bernard Ching, 43, a Harbor Tours employe characterized as "about the luckiest of the bunch" by a San Francisco General Hospital nurse, received minor injuries when the tour company's headquarters exploded in a rush of flames.

Pacific Gas and Electric Co. workers were checking a "patched" natural gas line outside the Pier 41 headquarters when the line exploded about 11 a.m. Wednesday.

Nine persons, including Ching, were injured, three seriously.

The 15-year-old building was completely destroyed.

Old barns a business boom

The Valley's old barns are a part of the ecological recycling movement these days, thanks to a couple of Valley residents who think the old wood has lots of charm.

Jim Van Ness, who lives in Livermore and has a lot of carpentry jobs in Pleasanton these days, has been making a living off barnwood since 1972. It's been a pretty skimpy living until lately, but now his business is picking up, thanks to his determination to stick to an occupation he loves.

Van Ness is going to work for Dave Stevens Design and Construction as a designer. He will continue, on a more lucrative basis, the work for which he has been praised since he picked up a hammer and nails a few years ago.

It wasn't always easy for Van Ness. A former apprentice carpenter, Van Ness didn't like the mass production approach of most homebuilders. The work was too monotonous to suit him.

Then he had an inspirational day back in 1972. He lost his girl friend, his job and his house all in the same day. And he turned to barnwood.

It was good therapy. You can't push barnwood. "You have to go with it. You have to treat each piece individually and it tells you what to do with it, not the other way around," said Van Ness.

Van Ness is proudest of his work at Master Jacks pleasanton store in Mission Plaza. He's had lots of compliments on that one. Mountain Haus is another Van Ness design, as is Master Jack's in Livermore and the old Audio Arts stereo store which recently moved from the old Value Giant location on Livermore's First Street.

Ed Brush, an English teacher at Granada High School in Livermore, is another barnwood enthusiast. He did over fellow teacher Joyce Baker's Livermore tract home in the antique wood.

"There's a warmth and naturalness to barnwood for people who want to get away from plastic food and plastic clothing. It adds a charm and it advances the notion of recycling," said Brush.

"I have a respect for old barns that stood duty for 50 or 60 years and now are serving in another capacity."

Brush also helped a friend, Jane Kaminsky, with the natural wood used throughout her Natural Food Co. in Mission Plaza.

Brush's son Scott pitched in, too, with a cast of thousands, including Rosando Escoto, Bill Singleton, Leon Kruitti, Michael Ruocco, Eugene Wheatley, and two guys named Russ and Robert. All for the love of the wood, the warm look of the natural materials, said Brush.

Van Ness thinks that Pleasanton is the next great city for the back to nature look in store interiors, both with barnwood and new wood.

"I was walking down Union Street last weekend and sure, the outside of the shops there are done nicely, but the interiors don't show much imagination. Merchants here in Pleasanton and the Valley are spending the money to have nice - looking interiors. I used to say you had to go out of the Valley for anything good, but it's all happening here now."

The wheel is coming full circle for Van Ness. He got his start by putting the wood from old barns into new buildings. One of his first jobs with Stevens' firm will be to design a total of 50 barns. Using new wood.

Bakke case deals blow to minority activists

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Constitution's 14th Amendment, which 109 years ago held out to blacks the promise of full membership in American society, soon may be the instrument by which a devastating blow is dealt to the nation's minority civil rights movement. The amendment ratified in 1868 granted citizenship to recently freed slaves and ordered all states not to "deny to any person ... the equal protection of the laws."

Civil rights activists have employed those wos ever since in efforts to stamp out what they perceived to be vestiges of the slave system. Their greatest victory came in 1954 when the Supreme Court outlawed racial segregation as "inherently unequal." Now the nation's highest court is considering a case many constitutional scholars believe could yield a decision equally historic.

A year and nine days ago, the California Supreme Court invoked the 14th Amendment to strike down a special admissions program used by a staterun medical school to give minority students a boost. The court said the program discriminaved against a white man by denying him equal protection.

Allan Paul Bakke, a white civil engineer who decided relatively late in life to become a doctor, was the victim of racial discrimination, the court said.

Bakke had carried his case against the University of California at Davis Medical School to the state's highest court after being refused admission to the school in 1973 and 1974.

He claimed the university's special admissions program, which reserved 16 of the 100 openings in each entering class for disadvantaged students, was really a racial quota that placed less qualified black, Hispanic and Asian-American applicants ahead of him. The California court said the 14th Amendment "applies to any person, and its lofty purpose, to secure equality of treatment to all, is incompatible with the premise that some races may be afforded a higher degree of protection against unequal treatment than others."

While some "affirmative actions" were proper, taking race into consideration for admissions could not meet constitutional challenges, the California court said.

The nation's leading civil rights attorneys, most of whom admittedly were unaware of the Bakke case until the California Supreme Court decision was handed down, recognized immediately the potential impact.

"If Bakke wins, the differences between school programs won't matter," said Ralph Smith, a professor at the University of Pennsylvania Law School and member of the National Conference of Black Lawyers. "A Bakke victory jeopardizes every program — it could spark challenges to every school's affirmative action program.

Apperson's dude ranch wins state court rule

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The state Court of Appeal has upheld granting of a controversial conditional use permit for building an outdoor recreation facility on Diamond A Ranch in southern Alameda County.

The 2-1 decision announced Friday involves plans to use 145 acres of the 2,555-acre ranch near Pleasanton and Livermore for 18 tennis courts, 40 riding horses with stables, a youth camp with shelter buildings, a health spa with outdoor springs and 322 guest villas and additional accommodations for its employes.

At its peak occupancy, it would house about 1,300 persons, including employes, about 100 during the off season.

The land had been zoned as part of the county's agricultural district.

Diamond A Ranch and William W. Apperson, owners, were granted the permit by the county Board of Supervisors under a zoning ordinance which expressly permits an outdoor recreation facility as a conditional use in its agricultural district.

The Sierra Club and others challenged granting of the permit.

In upholding the lower court's ruling, the appeal court held that the county had authority to authorize a use permit for such a facility reasonably found to meet general welfare criteria of the zoning ordinance.

It noted the permit provides the villas shall not be designed or used as dwelling units and sets many other conditions.

It also found the supervisors reasonably concluded that the use permit was closely attuned to the county's stated policy and goals for open spaces.

The court noted that 2,410 acres of the land will remain undeveloped. It agreed with the board's finding that this guaranteed retention "more than offsets any permanent detrimental effects of the proposed development" when compared with the benefits which taxpayers will gain from the recreational area.

The court lauded the plaintiff's efforts to protect such land from further exploitation, but said the board had to balance public needs with wise enviromental uses of resources.

Author speaks at Livermore

The Livermore Unified School District has announced the second speaker in its "Awareness in Education" lecture series will be author and educator Herb Kohl Tuesday .

Kohl's topic is slated to be "Creating and Sustaining Innovation," in which he will discuss successful teaching programs, materials, environments and methods of instruction.

The lecture is being conducted through the district's adult education office and in-service credit is given to teachers. No tuition or fee is charged and all lectures in the series are open to the public. The lectures are at 7:30 p.m. at St. Charles Borromeo Church, 1315 Lomitas Ave., Livermore.

ART CONFERENCE

Suburbs for the suburbs — a new migration east

As Pleasanton and Livermore move further away from the "city close — country quiet" mode of the past, Valley residents are moving east to Tracy and Manteca.

There, the country atmosphere and new houses selling for under $40,000 are still available.

Inexpensive housing and country living, once a selling point that brought families over the hills of Hayward and Oakland to the Valley, are now the reasons some of those same people are moving over yet another hill to San Joaquin County.

Fifteen years ago Graden Bannert Jr. moved from Hayward to Livermore to get away from the city. Four years ago he moved to Manteca for the same reason.

"I wanted to live in the country," explained the Livermore fireman. "Needless to say, country property here is ridiculous price-wise."

The fellow Bannert drives to work in Livermore with it takes about 35 minutes— moved from Livermore to Manteca because "he couldn't qualify for any new house in Livermore, and he wanted a new house."

Bannert said, "He got to looking and three years ago paid $26,000 for a 1500 square foot very, very nice house in Manteca."

Currently the lowest priced new houses in the Valley are in Livermore where a three bedroom home starts at $65,000. In Manteca signs advertise three bedroom houses starting at $32,500. Homes in Tracy are slightly higher, but considerably less than $65,000.

Taxes in San Joaquin Country are less also. The tax rate in Manteca where new homes are being built is $11.25 per $100 of assessed value. Taxes here range between $12.50 and $13.50 per $100 of assessed-value. A new $45,000 house in Manteca would cost about $1050 a year in taxes.

At the same time proposals like New Town are being turned away here to limit growth, Manteca has been experiencing a population increase of seven to ten per cent annually, said Manteca mayor Rick Wentworth.

Former Bay Area residents have accounted for more than 20 per cent of the population increase according to a survey taken by the Manteca School District. Tracy, although hampered in growth by a sewer system nearing capacity is seeing its share of Bay Area transferees also.

Vern Montgomery moved to Tracy two years ago. He was born, raised and owns a towing company in Oakland. He said he doesn't mind the 45 minute to one hour commute. "It's not like going on the Nimitz."

Montgomery said that of the 12 families on his block, five work in the Bay Area and, "I'm the closest to work." Others drive to San Francisco or the Peninsula.

Montgomery said everyone he knows who moved to Tracy did so because of lower property costs. "All the tract houses are sold, even before they are finished," he contended.

Wentworth sees continued growth in the area. "Some believe that it will be one city from Sacramento down to Modesto," said the mayor, and he expects Manteca to "be a fairly sizable community."

Former Livermore residents John and Diana Senter aren't looking forward to that.

The Senters bought a house and an acre of Manteca two and one-half years ago because, "I like being out away from things. I didn't like living in a tract," explained Senter.

Mrs. Senter agreed. Though she had been a little apprehendsive about the move at first, she's now sold on country living. "It really reminds me of what Pleasanton and Livermore used to be like."

> 'It reminds me of what Livermore used to be'

Senter, a Livermore fireman, and three other Livermore firemen share the driving. Senter said they figured the amount of driving each man does is equivalent to living two and one-half miles from the station and driving daily.

Although they live away from town, with 200 acres of corn for neighbors ,"sometimes I feel safer here than when we lived in Livermore," said Mrs. Senter.

But, has crime increased in Manteca? "Yes," said Wentworth, "but, I don't think you can attribute it to an expansion in population. Crime has increased everywhere."

Manteca is welcoming the increase in population. "We want to grow, and we want it at a rate we can control," said the mayor.

He added, "We've taken the stance that developers will pay the costs of growth." The developers are picking up the tab for sewers, road improvements, street lights and open space, said Wentworth. He added that lots are kept at about three-fifths of an acre.

Still, like long time residents of the Valley, there are those who don't relish continued growth. "I think there are quite a few. Particularly the older people who've been here quite a while," said Wentworth, a five-year Manteca resident.

"It's my opinion that if you restrict growth, you cause a false inflationary situtation," he said explaining that those few houses that are built are over valued in price.

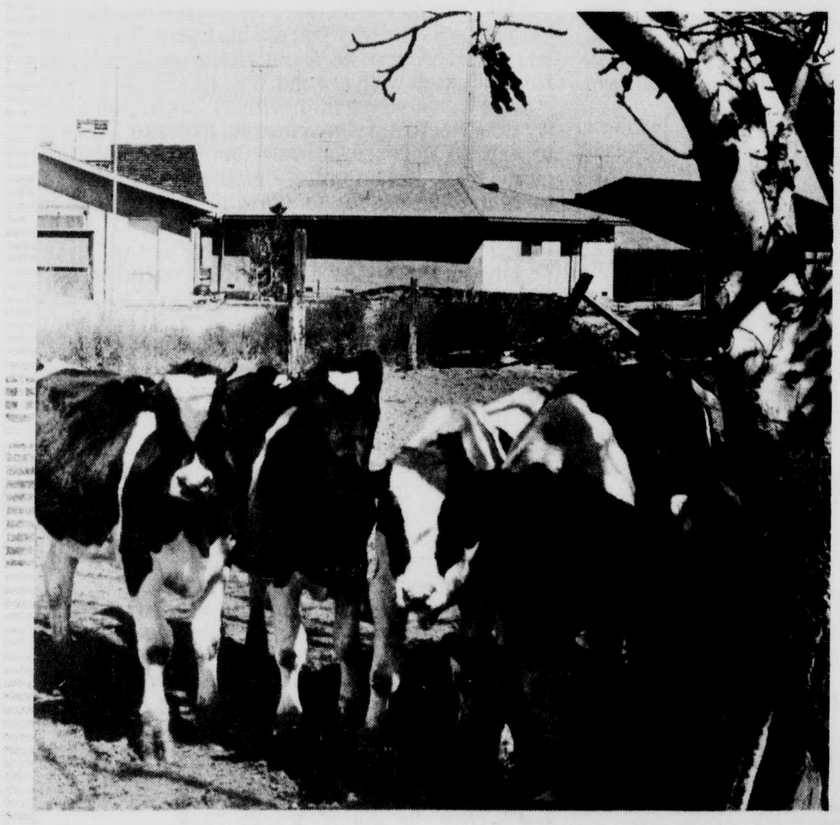
That's exactly what happened in the Valley, contends Hal Lohmann, a manager at Kaiser Sand and Gravel in Pleasanton. He said the influx of Valley people to Tracy and Manteca "points out that what people really want is contray to the ABAG (Association of Bay Area Governments) report" which proposes cities fill in their interior areas before expanding to the perimeters.

The immigration away from the suburbs isn't limited to Livermore and Pleasanton. Contra Costa County residents are moving north to Fairfield and Vacaville.

Lohmann said he knows two Kaiser employes who sold their San Ramon houses and moved to Vacaville where housing is cheaper and "taxes are like half of Contra Costa's."

lifestyle

Manteca, still a country town in many ways, is experiencing a face-lift in its downtown area.



Cow pastures and housing tracts are moving closer to each other as Manteca's growth continues.

One victory

"New Town" is a dead issue, at least for the foreseeable future. It was a triumph to which many people gave a great deal of effort, over a long period of time. It should not have been that difficult.

It is important to recall, in the flush of victory, that in all of the years Harlan Geldermanm's housing venture has been before us, not a single governmental agency or community board in this Valley has supported that proposal.

City council members and board directors in Livermore, in Pleasanton and in Dublin lent almost unanimous and spirited argument against that Las Positas Valley housing tract throughout several changes of administration. Countless others have joined in that crusade; two local newspapers — The Times and The Independent have been persistent in their editorial rejection of Geldermann's 15,000 - home gamble.

It was hardly the campaign of a "small group of no - growthers" as the developer now suggests. We were, for once, a Valley community united in our concern that this was the wrong kind of housing venture, at the wrong time, and in the wrong place. This was the argument which finally prevailed before the Alameda County Board of Supervisors.

But not without a struggle. It reminds us of that ludicrous attempt to dump the Bay Area's garbage into the heart of this Valley. It took three years of lobbying and legislating and pressure at the highest levels to keep 50 million tons of garbage from being spread fed into this basin's 9 highly sensitive underground water resource.

Then there was that proposal, a few years back, whereby Oakland would solve the housing problem of its minority citizens by annexing Camp Parks, and turning those 3000 acres into one vast low - income - housing extension for that troubled city.

What you share here today was achieved not without a fight. What we achieve for our tomorrows will be won by those who have a sense of balance, a feeling for what "community" is all about.

The week in retrospect

'30' for Lance

There is a growing consensus that the news media has claimed another scalp from the ranks of the mighty, the latest being just - resigned director of the Office of Management and Budget, Bert Lance.

This opinion gained popularity in the immediate hours after Lance's resignation during the inevitable "specials" on television and "commentarys" in newspapers around the country.

The opinion assumes the media went after Lance with malice aforethought, in the contemporary "tradition" established by the Washington Bobsy Twins of the cloak and typewriter.

We would agree that the media had some part in the former Calhoun Bank of Georgia executive's demise.

But the facts, as brought out by the congressional committee assigned to prob Lance's affairs, indicate the close Georgia friend of President Carter was involved in many financial improprieties.

As one commentator on television stated, what would happen if Lance were to remain and a question came up concerning the financial dealings of one of those investigating senators.

That Watergate and all its intrigues is "there" as a "goal" for all the investigative types to measure contemporary government Gods against, may have worked against Lance (and all others probed in the future).

The major news media now has the scent of blood. If there's smoke, might there not be the fire of another Watergate or Koreagate?

Commentators speaking to this point, including political writer Richard Reeves, speculated that the constant onslaught of the news media is what stripped Lance bare and drove all his innermost financial dealings out into full public view.

Some of the "revelations", best fit for the inside pages if anywhere, found their way on to Page 1 or the lead of the 11 o'clock news.

It is this round-the-clock, seven-day-a-week coverage that takes a seemingly unimportant item and makes it common knowledge that public officials are wary of— no matter if they have everything or nothing to hide.

Lance came across as an honest and devout person who, perhaps, over-extended himself in financial dealings. In any event, he doesn't deserve to be placed in the same category as those Watergate conspirators or Korean influence peddlers.

If there are any tears to be shed in this inflated tempest under the capital dome, perhaps they should be held for the next government official or associate who runs afoul of the media.

As much as we believe in freedom of the press, there is something disturbing about the whole Lance affair. And it rests in how Lance was pursued.

Letters to the Times

Porno advertising

Editor, The Times:

I read with interest your editorial in the Sunday paper in regard to X-rated or unrated movies. I wish to commend you for your decision to make such a stand. When you look through other papers that come into homes you begin to wonder what type of standards they have for advertising these types of entertainment.

Last week when we looked at the movie section in another paper we saw advertising for "Star Wars" and Cinderalla "02000" side by side. I was appalled.

I wish to once again say how pleased I am to see that the local paper is taking a stand before a problem really exists. Thank You.

Gail Frost
Pleasanton

Pastor responds

Editor, The Times:

Thank you for the new policy of the Valley Times to not accept explicit illustrations and language in the publication of advertisements for X-rated movies. Thousands of Christians and other moral citizens of the Valley welcome this decision. You have done a great service to our children. Though we as adults can discipline ourselves to look past such advertising, our children are not yet so strong.

Naturally it is my hope that if there are any theaters in the valley that still show X-rated films, the box office receipts will be so poor that those theaters will cease to offer such films. The citizens of the valley hold the real answer to stopping the use of such films. If they will stop going to these movies, the theaters will stop showing them.

Perhaps there is another step that the Times could take to stop the overemphasis on sex. There should be a firm stated policy that the reporters will not vividly describe the details of the sex crimes they are reporting. It is my opinion that The Times already has a very good record on this point. This is all the more reason why they should take the leadership in stating such a policy.

Too often other large California newspapers exploit the public by using sexually oriented headlines. They go on to report all the details in a most graphic way. More than once moral citizens have had to stop reading an article right in the middle because of the suggestive and/or explicit details. Responsible policy on the part of a newspaper would give guidance to reporters.

Thank you again for an excellent step that The Times has taken in combating pornography.

Local candidates

Editor, The Times:

Last week the Pleasanton Times ran a news item regarding Ken Hart's announcement to run for City Council and said that he is not eligible to run because he is not yet a resident of the city of Pleasanton.

I am not necessarily trying to side with Ken Hart, but I would like to put forth a question. Why is it that a Council member must reside within the city limits and yet the city manager, public safety administrator, fire chief and the chief of police are not required to do the same? Yet all of these officials make decisions that affect us all on a day to day basis. It certainly seems to me that if they don't have to be city residents then council members such as Ken Hart shouldn't have to be residents either.

John N. Close D.C.
Pleasanton

(Requirements for municipal employes to live in that city are a local option, although certain strict ordinances in that regard have been rejected by the courts. State statutes require elected officers to reside in the constituency they would represent, but that has now been amended to just 30 days residency in that constituency prior to date of election. In Pleasanton's case, all of the department heads recited by Dr. Close reside in the city limits. — Editor)

Feingold diet

Editor, The Times
Attention Arline Butterfield:

I am writing to personally thank you for writing such a terrific article on the Feingold Diet and our Association. It was supurb! I even received a call from Dr. Feingold's office expressing their pleasure.

As you know, our group is a chapter of the Bay Area Association and we are still organizing. We now have about 40 members — mostly from Pleasanton and Livermore — thanks to your article! Now if the Contra Costa Times would do a similar article, we could reach families in the rest of the county.

Thanks again! And please share this letter with your editor.

Staley views energy

Editor, The Times:

As there has been editorials on the energy ordinance, as well as some letters, I thought you might find my analysis worth considering also.

It is easy to fall prey to the solgan of too much police power. But an examination of the energy ordinance and its effect reveal the following:

1. No one is required to do anything unless the house is sold to another party;
2. Nothing is required of those homes already built to the standard of the ordinance;
3. Nothing is required of those homes which do not have easy access to the area to be insulated;
4. Nothing is required as to who is to pay for the costs. The buyer should pay for it since he or she is getting the benefit of the increased value, and the energy saved. The cost is estimated to average $250 (this assumes professional installation) or roughly equivalent to one year's heating bill. The energy savings is estimated to be 25 percent so it should be fully paid for in 4 years.

Most informed people believe that there is an energy shortage, and therefore every citizen who can personally afford it does not have the right to waste the energy that our whole society needs.

No one has suggested that the insulation requirement isn't appropriate for new construction. What then is the important distinction between new and existing housing? The purchasers benefit; the cost may be amortized in the loan, the community benefits by the upgrading of its housing, as well as by cutting down on its energy use, in short no one bears a heavy burden and the general welfare is enhanced,

With the amendments I have introduced to the ordinance that allows a properly licensed person to certify that there has been compliance or exemption from the ordinance, the objection to cost of inspection and unwarranted intrustion have been removed. I believe that our energy oridinance balances the rights of individuals with the good of the whole society in an acceptable manner.

As the city attorney has pointed out, the State is already moving to take these decisions away from local government. This trend is powered by the reluctance of local officials to tackle difficult issues that can be passed to others.

The danger of our rights comes not from local officials who constantly balance individual freedom with the general welfare, but from those who constantly oppose any regulation as an infringment of their rights. These people invite, even hasten, the day when all these regulations will be made by bureaucrats who are removed from the local political process.

John Staley

(Mr. Staley is a member of the Livermore City Council and a practicing attorney in that community — Editor)

RON McNICOLL

Ava Pauling

Maybe all great people have auras about them.

Linus Pauling certainly did when I saw him last week at the Livermore Unitarian Fellowship. Perhaps it was the natty, high - stepping way he walked. Or the angel - fleeced hair cascading down from the bald spot on his head, making him look like a combination of Mr. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch and an Oxford professor. Or maybe he has a better tailor than the rest of us.

But the Nobel Prize - winning scientist and booster of Vitamin C was not the central attraction for those who journeyed to the newly - acquired Unitarian center on Vasco Road. The speaker that day was Ava Pauling, Linus's wife. The eminent doctor simply came along for the ride.

Ms. Pauling is nearly her husband's age and has the kind face of someone who has carried a tireless idealism and inquiring mind throughout her life. She gave an interesting talk on her experiences as a Unitarian, with the central theme of the courage of self - assertion.

There was, for example, Servetus. John Calvin had him executed in 1511 because Servetus preached that God was one person, not three entities in one God. Servetus was the first Unitarian martyr.

Servetus stood up for a religious belief. In the 1950's in America, an entire Unitarian chuch in Los Angeles stood up for a political belief. The congregation met a happier fate than Michael Servetus.

The Los Angeles church refused to sign a loyalty oath in the 1950's. The oath was required of churches which wanted to keep their tax - exempt statuses. Apparently the California Legislature thought that any church concerned about social questions had to be part of a Communist conspiracy, because, after all, in religion you should just pray to God. The law was influenced by the crusade of the junior senator from Wisconsin, Joe McCarthy, who thought the country was ripe for left wing revolution in those days after World War II.

The Los Angeles Unitarian church took the loyalty oath to court and won. It got its $30,000 tax payment returned.

The McCarthy era was the bad old days, said Ava Pauling. "You were afraid to say anything unless you were sure it would be accepted." Before McCarthy, people of all political persuasions used to get together on election night to listen to the returns come in on radio. That ended when a person's political beliefs suddenly became a test of friendship, she said. After that, you listened to the returns only with people who thought your own way. That kind of social milieu is deadening to the spirit because there no longer is a free exchange of information, she said.

Ava Pauling likes Unitarianism because it is a religion without dogma. "There is an open - minded willingness to learn. Emerson said that if a person give up all dogma or religion, but bends to truth, justice and love ... he or she is on an open highway to those truths and confidences that are the true way of religion."

Having been around great scientists all her life, Ms. Pauling was pleased to quote from Bertrand Russell : "Our lives ought to be inspired by love and controlled by knowledge." And also : "If we lived with love to the same degree as we live with the energy with which we try to do each other in, this would be a grand world."

Indeed it would. My eyes recently fell on a line from George Bernard Shaw's play about St. Joan of Arc. "Oh, God, who madest this beautiful earth, when will it be ready to receive thy saints?" Ava Pauling is trying to make it a little easier for more saints to get around and do their thing.

Murray Teachers respond

Editor, The Times

As president of the Murray Teachers Association, I feel the need to respond to Dianne Foster's letter condemning the right of the public employe to strike.

You have made a number of statements that I wish to speak to. Striking is not as prevalent as it is made to seem and is not necessarily the right of public employes. What it is, is a method that is used after all other methods of talking have failed. Even then at times, teachers find that their professionalism prohibits them from striking, but, professionalism doesn't pay the bills. Must teachers always accept the dictates of the board without some recourse? Are not teachers taxpayers too?

You say that you support the teachers association. How? By placing restrictive demands on them at the bargaining table? By forcing them to accept, without say, the whims of local communities in the area of education? Do you participate at your local's representative council? Are you on the negotiating team? Do you attend meetings regularly? You, claim you are not represented! Each school, in each district in the state, has a representative council made up of teachers from each school. ... These representatives are concerned professionals that represent their schools' viewpoint, as well as their own ... Saying you are not represented is false. The Rhodda Bill requires all teachers, whether they are a member or not, to be represented and have input in all decisions made by the local association. All members opinions are heard. Have you contacted your local?

You claim that the Rhodda Bill has caused turmoil in talks between the teachers and boards. As is with all new bills, until some time has been spent working with it, all bills may seem a little difficult, but far from unworkable. To presume that Senator Rhodda was able to write this bill for teachers, because he once was a teacher, is to presume that all Senators, and Congressmen and women, are too ... Unlike previous contract talks, teachers have some recourse to their disputes.

The honor system of boards taking care of the teachers had past. As Steve Edwards, president of CTA has said, "We, (the teachers) had the honor, they had the system." You are against binding arbitration too! You claim that it is new and has not been tried. Where? Certainly not in California, which has enjoyed binding arbitration in many fields.

Binding arbitration provides for a neutral third party, agreed upon by both parties, to view all the facts, listen to both sides and make a decision that is binding. Did you mention that binding arbitration is only on items in the contract?

Binding arbitration provides one more thing — respect. Teachers now know that striking to be heard is not necessary. They can be heard by a neutral third party and abide by that decision. You assume that all decisions will benefit the teachers. I have found that to be untrue. Finally, you act as if teachers alone are responsible for the condition of taxes ... Taxes are a burden for all, including teachers, but lumping the rights of public employes with tax reform is not the way to solve it either.

Public employes do work for you, but, they are you. There are hundreds of thousands of public employes. Should they be denied the same rights that most private business's enjoy?

Teachers are responsive to the needs of the community. Can the same be said for the community?

round the town

Ah yes, the good old days.

We were talking about them, John Amaral and I, just the other day.

"It was a lot different then, not just the place, but the people," John remembered. He was looking back to 1924, the year he started up in business, as a merchant in Pleasanton.

It was a thriving mercantile center, way back then. The hay - hops - and - horses were more than a local claim to fame. They were the sustenance of life, the reason for being, in Pleasanton, in Livermore too. Dublin was better known for its sheep and its turkeys. Sunol was the "country quiet" playground of the San Francisco rich. They came by train. Got off at the Sunol station. Were picked up there by private carriage, carried to their weekend retreat in Kilkare Canyon, or deposited in one of Sunol's famed — and some infamed — resorts.

The hamlets of yesteryear never lacked for action, of one kind or another. Card rooms flourished. Hotels abounded. In Dublin, too, the last stage coach stop before the long climb to Martinez.

This was a place of rest for travellers. In some ways, there was rest also for those who remained here.

"The pace was slower then," John Amaral remembers. "People worked hard, but they still found time to play, to get to know each other."

That might be what John misses most, in the busy suburban hub which now surrounds him, and engulfs his small office on St. John Street in downtown Pleasanton.

It was from that office where John Amaral, later joined by his wife Ruth, held forth as real estate agent and insurance broker. It was a service they would render, from that same spot, for half a century.

"You could meet everybody in town just by walking two blocks in any direction from your office," John recalls. If you walked just a little further, you could probably find the town's action for that evening ... dancing at the Nevis Pavillion, Lodge rites at the Oddfellow's Hall, or the inevitable card game ...

Livermore was cowboy country. Everything about the town had that real - western - flavor. When Second Street was paved in dirt. And every store boasted a generous overhang, to shade customers from the hot noonday sun.

On a busy day, in autumn, Second Street would be clogged with wagons ... and then later motor coaches ... headed to market, with the stock and the grain of Livermore's production.

The Valley was then, even as now, a crossroads of commerce, the point of departure between large urban centers along the Bay, and the endless stretch of grain and produce and livestock which abounded in most of mid - California.

But it was the people, and their pace, which really made the towns different then, from what they are now. That is the view of one who has lived and worked in both ends of the century. But always from the same base.

"I had the gas station on the corner of Main and St. Mary's of course, and then later I built those homes along Amaral Circle ... one of the first housing tracts in the Valley." John remembers.

But he remembers best the people. The husband - and - wife teams which were the heart of local commerce. The farmers who lived from one harvest to the next, one reversal after another.

"People knew how to work then, and how to live on practically nothing, when they had to." John survived the Great Depression. He remembers all the others who did. He can name you every one who didn't.

"We trusted each other, we supported each other. That was the way you did business. There was a lot of bartering ... exchanging things, or services. Not too much cash around."

John was a young man with a vision. A community that would survive, emerge, prosper. They had to wait for 20 years, or more, but the dream finally came true. Not too many of those who dreamed then, are here today to share in the fruits of that prosperity.

He has little patience with today's stop - growth advocate. He is even less patient with those who see no future for their town, beyond what is already here.

"This is a wonderful country," John Amaral says with real warmth. "A person can accomplish anything they want to in the United States of America, if he's willing to work for it."

Not all of us will be asked to work for 50 years or more. Few of us will be privileged to look back on the town, the people, the changes, from one end of the century to the other.

This month John and Ruth Amaral closed down their office on St. Mary Street. Transferred the insurance accounts to another firm. Took down the sign that said "John J. Amaral, Realtor." Sold the building to the man who had earlier bought the gas station on the corner.

"We're just going to sit back for a while and enjoy the town and the people," John says, simply. It is a luxury no two people ever deserved more.

Dr. Joyce Brothers

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: I'm a nursery school teacher in a rather nice area. I'm shocked by the violence, not only in the neighborhood children but even in some of my little pupils. None of the pat theories about violence fit in this area. Many of the children come from quite sophisticated homes. They are neither poor nor underprivileged. They don't watch hours of TV violence and what they do watch is monitored. I can't explain it. Can you? — N.W.

DEAR N.W.: We can't look for any single, simple cause for the growth of violence. Many changes have led to this increase in callousness and the feeling that human life isn't worth much.

I agree with much of what Nobel Prize winner Konrad Lorenz says on the subject. He feels that crime and terrorism are surging because people are unable to establish close relationships. There is a fear of commitment and a fear of closeness.

He has also concluded that restraints on aggression depend on the history of our personal acquaintance. Those who have never been able to establish personal bonds also have little or no curiosity. There is a blankness, a dullness about these people who seem to need ever increasing jolts of sensations in order to give them a sense of being alive.

Many children, he says, suffer lasting psychological damage because parents don't take time to play with, love and fondle them.

That first bond between mother and child is the most important. When no closeness is established with a single figure in the infant's life, the child seems to have difficulty forming close relationships in later years.

The rich, like the very poor, often have this first relationship interrupted. The poor often have to leave in order to work and the rich often disappear for other reasons. The first three or four years of life are crucial and it may be that when this fundamental bond is missing, violence and aggression fill the void.

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: I'm worried about my father. My mother died six weeks ago, and since they were so close, I know he'll take it very hard. My wife and I offered to have him come and live with us but he declined, perhaps, because he thought he'd get in the way. This isn't true. We're both very fond of him, as are our children. Do you think we should press the matter and insist or just let him go at his own speed? — Y.P.

DEAR Y.P.: As long as he knows he's welcome, it will be easier for him to pass through this difficult period. Many of us make the mistake of trying to hurry others through the mourning period. Actually, when people are allowed to take the time they need to heal, as long as it is within a reasonable time, they usually make a healthier adjustment. People who try to repress their grief because they're embarrassed, or because they're afraid they're depressing others, have a more difficult time getting their lives back in order. The sadness they've repressed often surfaces in nightmares or dreams with deep feelings of guilt.

Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 20 years old and a female who looks like a boy because of my small breasts. I wear a 32A bra and have done everything to help them get larger but nothing seems to work. Could you tell me what I need to know about silicone injections, like how much it costs, where I can get it done, and what kind of doctor does it?

DEAR READER — See a specialist in obstetrics and gynecology before you do anything about your breasts. Sometimes the breast development is related to the balance of female hormones and help in that department is the proper procedure. Also, he will be able to tell you what is available in your community if breast augmentation is really indicated.

Silicone injections are usually illegal. Implants are another story. I don't approve of these either in young women with your complaint. Some of my colleagues are not happy with my view. I agree that breast implants and reconstructive surgery are of great benefit for the woman who has breast disease and needs help. This would include the woman who has breast surgery for cancer. This is not the same problem though as presented by the many women who think they would like to have larger breasts for one reason or another.

Good posture that keeps the shoulders back improves a small breast's appearance as does development of the chest muscles that the breasts rest upon. Neither measure increases the breast size, only the appearance.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I read your column in the Mainichi Daily News, Osaka, Japan, and would appreciate your opinion about "hot" sauces. I love them all, tabasco, chili, kim-chee, curry — but I don't take as much as I would like because of a vague feeling that they may be bad for you. But Mexicans, Koreans and Indians are healthy enough and I have never had any ill effects that I know of. Is this just a superstition or an old-wives tale?

DEAR READER — The old saying, "one man's meat is another man's poison" certainly applies here. The hot spicy taste is dependent upon chemicals that many people tolerate very well. In fact, one reason people in the spice world have less heart and vascular disease is that they depend upon spices for flavor rather than copious amounts of fat, particularly butter.

People who have any form of digestive disturbance may not tolerate spices so well. They may irritate the bowel and may be a factor in diarrhea in some people. In general if you have bowel or stomach trouble it is well to avoid spicy foods.

People who like spicy foods should know that chemicals are absorbed into the blood stream and many of these impart a smell to the air breathed out of the lungs, hence garlic breath, onion breath and yes, alcohol breath.

Butterflies are colorful insects we often see on summer days fluttering from flower to flower, drinking the sweet liquid called nectar.

Butterflies have no chewing mouth parts to eat with. Instead, the butterfly has a long slender drinking tube, called a proboscis. The insect sucks up nectar and other liquids the way you sip through a soda straw.

When the butterfly is not eating, the long tube curls up like a watch spring beneath the insect's face.

A butterfly tastes a flower's sweetness with the soles of its feet, not with its tongue. When its feet touch the petals of a flower, the sweet taste causes the insect to uncoil its drinking tube.

Above the insect's eyes are a pair of hairlike antennae. Scientists believe that the butterfly uses its antennae for smelling and that the antennae may help the butterfly hear, but no one knows exactly how.

Don't be intimidated by enterprises this coming year that are a bit larger than you're used to handling. You have what it takes to measure up.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Ambitions are apt to be unfulfilled today, not because they are beyond your reach, but you will rationalize reasons for delay.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) As a bargain hunter you leave a lot to be desired today. Take care or someone may unload their white elephant on you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You may be unsure of yourself today because your goals aren't clearly defined. Hazy targets blur your marksmanship.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Today, when discussing a mutual friend who isn't present, say nothing about this person that isn't factual.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Be sure anyone doing work for you today estimates all the costs accurately, then double-check just to be safe.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) There is opportunity about you today, but you must be keenly perceptive to discern it. Don't let the chance for something good go by.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your willingness to do things for others today could possibly be for the wrong reasons. To expect something in return isn't the noblest motivation.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) A friend who talks much, but in essence says little, could get you all enthused today regarding a venture of small promises.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) In matters where you hope to gain materially today, don't use methods or tactics that aren't up to your usually high standards.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Unless your plans are well-conceived today your energies will be misdirected. Reason things out, then act — not vice versa.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Business or commecial dealings in general could be exceptionally tricky for you today. Be wary where money is involved.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A forceful associate could coerce you to make commitments today that oppose your better judgment. Be strong enough to say "No."

Opening lead — K♥

By Oswald & James Jacoby

Oswald: "The late Commander Winfield Liggett once said, 'I care not who does the nation's bidding if I can make the nation's opening leads'."

Jim: "The Commander meant that the opening lead frequently determined whether the contract would make or go down."

Oswald: "West was really shocked by the bidding. He felt that North was making one of those premature sacrifices so his double rang like the crack of doom. Then he slapped the king of hearts on the table! South discarded dummy's club on his ace, went after trumps and wound up making the slam."

Jim: "West apologized profusely to his partner, but said that he just didn't want to open the ace of clubs."

Oswald: "We agree that the club lead could prove unsatisfactory, but if West had really been on his toes he would have found the winning lead."

Jim: "The club lead would also have worked this time, but West had one outstanding lead at his disposal. The ace of trumps!"

Overload on the SR playfields

San Ramon Valley residents are not only feeling the crunch of school overcrowding, they're also quickly outgrowing their ball parks, tennis courts, playing fields, and swimming pools.

It all boils down to too many participants for too few facilities. officials from valley sports organizations told the R-7 parks district advisory committee Tuesday.

Furthermore, they said, with the valley's continuing rapid growth, the consensus was tht thp problem will get worse before it gets better.

"The situation is terrible," Gary Gentile of the Community Services District admitted. Gentile, who handles the scheduling logistics for the various district fields, said every field is used Monday through Saturday from 3:30 p.m. to dark during the school year and from 9 a.m. to sundown during the summer. Even Sunday, which usedto be a rest day, is now partially booked because of the huge backup of activities, he added.

As each sporting official told his or her story, committee members began to look more and more depressed. Here are some of the highlights:

Valley baeball little league players number about 1,800 with the bulk of the players using about 40 ball fields spread over 14 schools. This number, league officials noted, doesn't include girls' softball leagues or adult groups. The two largest leagues, San Ramon Valley and South Danville, play a total of 750-800 games during their April through July season they also hold 2,500 3,000 practices starting in February.

The South Danville league, which draws youngsters from the area between Sycamore Valley and Norris Canyon Roads, has grown from 22 to 30 teams in the last four years, and there's already a player's waiting list.

"We're a booming area," said Rod Rumble of the group, and "we're expecting a sizable increase."

But if the growth of baseball teams appears somewhat overwhelming, consider the increase in the number of soccer enthusiasts.

Tom Colter, co-director of the Mustang Soccer League, reeled off these mind - boggling statistics. Since 1975 his league has grown from 700 boys and 100 girls to 1,600 and 500 respectively. Next year should see the entrance of 400 more boys and 200 more girls, while in 1980, the total should hover somewhere between 3,500 and 4,000. At the moment a total of 11 fields are at their disposal.

But there is also a group, south of Danville, the San Ramon Soccer League, which includes another 1,200 boys and 400 girls, and which is also growing. The four recently built Valley Community Services District fields they use are already insufficient, noted league official Dave Enke. Their waiting list already numbers 50, he added.

However, both soccer and baseball spokesmen said certain fields could comfortably be used for both sports, provided they were carefully designed.

But soccer and baseball players aren't the only ones in need. Add to the situation the growing number of tennis devotees, who must share the 13 school tennis courts with student players, and the private swim clubs, who also have to wait their turn for community facilities.

There are big problems, committee members pointed out. First level land, for the most part, is unavailable. It's either not for sale or out of reach of R-7's pocketbook, lamented the committee. The district, they said, must pay fair market value for property. And property values seem to go up overnight.

At the moment, however, the district does have one ace up its sleeve-the 45 acre Tibros site in the Danville Station area. After more than two years of negotiation with various agencies, 20 of those precious acres will soon become the sole property of the district. Not only that, but both the school district and Flood Control district, who are or will be the landlords of the other 25 acres, appear to be agreeable to a master recreational plan for the total site, said committee members.

Rough sketches, unveiled Tuesday, call for seven to 10 soccer fields, six baseball diamonds with bases 60 feet apart, one diamond with 90 foot bases, 16 tennis courts, four picnic areas, two children's play areas, one 10,000 square foot multi-use building, and 180 parking spaces.

If all goes according to schedule, the advisory group said construction on phase one of the project could begin next summer, with some facilities in use by the summer of '79.

County commission openings

MARTINEZ — There are five openings on the Contra Costa county Manpower Advisory Council.

Judy Ann Miller, director of the county manpower project,stated each person selected would serve three year terms. The terms would expire Sept. 30, 1980.

Compensation will be actual and necessary expenses such as mileage reimbursement, Miller stated.

Oct. 14 is the deadline for filing applications.

Two of the five openings are for representatives of community-based organizations. Two others are for eee representatives of the client community. One position is for a representative of business.

Members must be able to attend a meeting once a month; generally on Monday afternoon. Each member serves on one of four subcommittees that meet about once a month.

Interested persons should obtain an application form from the County Manpower Office, 2401-D Stanwell Drive, Concord 94520, phone 671-4239.

The county manpower program serves unemployed, underemployed and economically disadvantaged residents in areas of highest unemployment. The council sets priorities for the groups to be served.

The council hears proposals from agencies and organizations that wish to be funded. Current manpower programs are evaluated.

Effects of drought

Produce market good but cautious for '78

The California drought failed to dry up the nation's supply of fresh fruits and vegetables this summer, but the prospects for future harvests and prices are still in doubt.

"Without at least average winter precipitation in the mountains, 1978 will be the severest test yet," said Charles W. Porter, an agricultural economist with the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

California is the nation's biggest fruit and vegetable producer. Porter stressed that even if crops from California are smaller than usual, some of the difference will probably be made up by growers in other states, but problems could remain.

Porter spoke at a recent conference sponsored by the United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Association, a trade group whose 2,700 member firms account for over 80 per cent of total U.S. commercial fresh fruit and vegetable sales.

Despite the unfavorable weather in 1977, starting with a freeze in Florida, Porter said none of the dire predictions about widespread shortages came true. There were week-to-week fluctuations, some of them severe, but no long-lasting market disruptions.

Porter explained the Florida situation this way: "When the freeze hit ... the supply of tomatoes, peppers, eggplant and cucumbers ... was restricted to salvage operations. Snap beans were immediately wiped out. As a result, fresh vegetable prices soared."

Imports of items such as tomatoes from Mexico increased steadily into May. And by then, Florida was selling spring tomatoes and farmers who replanted after the freeze started marketing their produce. Texas and California were starting their usual shipments. Supplies of some items were above normal.

"During April and May, grower prices tumbled," Porter said. The supply pattern through the spring was one "of bunched-together marketings. When the spring vegetable production increase and the stepped-up import activity are balanced against the reduced winter volume, fresh vegetable supplies the first half of 1977 turned out to be only 2 per cent less than a year earlier."

Supplies also turned out better than expected in California, which last year produced 40 per cent of the country's fruit and vegetables.

Porter said many important vegetable districts irrigate with water from wells, rather than from reservoirs critically low from the drought. By using well water and, in some cases, digging deeper, growers managed to produce normal crops.

Producers in other states, meanwhile, anticipating smaller supplies from California, stepped up plantings of such things as cabbage, peppers and sweet corn.

"Grower prices are now very close to 1976 levels," Porter said, and "Retail vegetable prices have ... followed the trendes."

When it comes to 1978, however, Porter said, "No one knows how much longer ground water supplies can be heavily drawn upon ... No one at this moment is very certain whether well water supplies in the West would carry us through another year like 1977."

Banks pledge farmers $$ support

By Robert McEwen
By The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO AP — The farmer's image as a trustworthy, hardworking plodder who honors his debts has put him in good stead with California banks which must finance him through the drought.

Despite projections which show California farmers will lose about $800 million this year because of the drought, banks vow they will continue to approve a high volume of large agricultural loans.

"We'll continue to finance them as long as the drought goes on," said Bill Gentle, vice president of Security Pacific in Fresno. "We know the rains will come back and in the meantime, we have to eat."

Ralph Davis, manager of the Agricultural Department at Wells Fargo here, said farmers "are a very resourceful people who have demonstrated over the years a tremendous ability to adapt."

Bank of America also is giving farmers the benefit of the doubt. "Our view is that we will attempt to work with individual borrowers and make the best of it," said economist Dick Courtney.

"If a farmer has a plan we think is viable we'll go as far as we can with him."

Each stressed, however, that the pledge to agriculture is a general policy and that their bank makes loan decisions on the merits of particular cases.

All three banks said the drought has not affected the number of loan application. But the amounts farmers are seeking are much higher, they added.

At Security Pacific, which makes more than 1,000 agricultural loans a year, the amount borrowed is up an average of 40 per cent, Gentle said.

"They range from $10,000 for a small farmer raising 20 acres of Thompson seedless grapes to $10 million for large diversified farmers in the Imperial Valley or corporate operations on the west side of the San Joaquin Valley," he said.

Davis said the size of loans at Wells Fargo increased about 15 per cent this year, as opposed to an average of about 10 per cent in each of the past few years.

"The drought means that more farmers are buying pumps, motors, sprinklers and irrigation equipment," he said. "In the past they have borrowed conservatively and established good credit, so now many are asking for larger amounts and getting what they need."

Many of the loans are going to cattle ranchers, according to Davis, economists at other banks and at the state Department of Food and Agriculture.

They estimated that about half of the loss to agriculture anywhere from $400 million to $500 million will be absorbed by cattle ranchers this year. Receipts are expected to fall almost four per cent to about $2.8 billion.

Production costs have risen because of the drought, and nationwide cattle prices continue depressed. But the Bank of America said that by next year the industry is likely to strengthen as feed costs ease and steer prices rise.

Besides cattle and calves, receipts will decline for poultry and eggs and all grains and field crops except cotton. Cash receipts will rise for dairy products, vegetables, fruits and nuts, the bank said.

Poultry and eggs are expected to yield about $600 million, down about three per cent from last year, and field crop cash receipts will plunge 19 per cent to $2.1 billion, estimates show.

Cotton acreage, on the other hand, totals 1.35 million acres in 1977, a 19 per cent increase over last year and the largest planting since 1953.

This rise was attributed to a tight supply worldwide and a strong demand, boosting Fresno's cotton price to 80 cents a pound in March, as opposed 57 per cent a year earlier.

Cash receipts for vegetable will increase almost 15 per cent to $1.8 billion because of favorable market prices and a large crop of processing tomatoes this year's major vegetable crop.

Although the drought has cut the 1977 yield of fruits and nuts, production as well as gross receipts will exceed last year's levels. Grapes will contribute most to the expected 28 per cent rise in cash receipts.

British income tax system sparks talent fame drain

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Britain is suffering a fame drain.

Some of the country's top actors, entertainers, athletes and writers have left, saying they can't afford the income tax.

The latest to go is movie actor Michael Caine who says he is looking for a permanent home in the United States.

Famous refugees from the Board of Inland Revenue include actors Richard Burton and Sean Connery, pop stars Mick Jagger, Rod Stewart and Tom Jones, 1976 world champion race driver James Hunt, golfer Tony Jacklin, tennis player Virginia Wade, and thriller writers Frederick Forsyth and Alistair MacLean.

Britain has had its tax exiles in the past. Some like playwright Noel Coward and authors P.G. Wodehouse and Somerset Maugham, however, lived abroad for other reasons as well as to escape taxes.

The exodus accelerated after the Labor government's coming to power in late 1964 and the start of taxes of up to 90 per cent on annual incomes over 100,000 pounds, then worth $280,000.

Favorite sanctuaries for the tax exiles are the United States, where income tax is nearly one-third less than in Britain, France, Switzerland, Spain, the Irish Republic and the English Channel Islands. All of them allow top earners to keep more of their money than Britain.

The Labor government, whose Tory predecessors first imposed income tax at 4 per cent in 1799 to help finance a war against France, today claws back 83 per cent of earned incomes over $37,511, the highest rate in the industrialized world, official spokesmen admit.

The tax rises to 98 per cent if the taxpayer has additional investment income exceeding $4,375.

Michael Caine, 44, reputed to earn up to $1.2 million a year as an international box-office attraction, says he cannot stand the tax burden any longer.

Caine has rented a home for his family in Beverly Hills, Calif., while he currently films in the state. Two years ago he remarked during a visit to California: "I've made a lot of noise about taxes, but I know I'll never emigrate."

What made him change his mind?

He told British reporters in Los Angeles that heavily taxed film-making in Britain has reduced the opportunities for international pictures here. He said he waited seven months in England to do a film, turning down numerous American offers, and then the financing for the British movie failed to come through.

"So I am faced with going abroad to earn money and then going home to pay to the same government the same ruinous taxes on it that have ruined my industry," the actor said.

"I love England, but I shall stay away until the policies of taxation change."

Federal unit suggests CB training for teens

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government advisory group is considering a standardized training program aimed at teenagers that it hopes would improve Citizens Band radio communications.

The program would be designed for youths because they are more accessible, not because they are considered the most frequent violators of CB rules.

Although a CB license applicant must certify he has a copy of Federal Communications Commission regulations, no test of his knowledge is required.

Indeed, some CBers wonder whether the rules are even read.

But Arlan VanDoorn, deputy chief of the FCC's Safety and Special Radio Services Bureau, reports "a lot of demand for an official FCC educational package" including one that could be combined with high school driver education programs.

A task force of the VCC's Personal User Radio Advisory Committee — PURAC — has come up with just such a program, "designed, focused and directed toward teaching young people."

Wisdom teeth loss aids natural growth

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Getting your wisdom teeth pulled — that dread rite of youth — is an unavoidable consequence of man's natural evolution, a prominent oral surgeon said Friday.

Dr. Harold Hargis of Los Angeles, a member of the American Society of Oral Surgeons meeting here last week, says that prehistoric man's protruding jaw gradually receded when he began to walk in an upright position.

But a shrinking jaw, while it gave him a more pleasant and balanced appearance, also put the squeeze on teeth.

The result, says Hargis, is less room for teeth to grow, which often causes third molars — or wisdom teeth — to become impacted or embedded.

According to Hargis, wisdom teeth often grow forward, pushing against neighboring molars. "Even when there is no pain, the wisdom teeth can damage molars and the jawbone," he says.

"If caught in the teenage years, when the roots are not fully formed and the bone is less dense, wisdom teeth are less complicated to remove," he says.

Impacted wisdom teeth can also cause other problems, like fluid-filled cysts that require complicated surgery to remove.

The American Society of Oral Surgeons held a number of seminars last week, including "psychosedation" — procedures for lessening the pain of oral surgery — and how to reimplant a child's tooth if it is knocked out.

On Sports

ALAMO — You're a legendary sports figure.

For 23 years you've dominated a sport in the manner of Wilt Chamberlain, Muhammad Ali or A.J. Foyt. Your career strike out totals read like a typographical error.

At age 36, you finish with a 39-2 won-lost record in the toughest league your sport has to offer and are runner-up in an Athlete of the Year vote. You come back for a 24-4 summer and another national championship.

You're in a position most ballplayers only dream of — you own part of the team you sweat for. To boot, you're the president of the league.

Joan Joyce

Yet, two hours of batting practice, 20 minutes of warm-ups and a four-hour doubleheader in cities from Bakersfield to Buffalo night upon night lose their charm after two dozen springs and summers.

Though you hate to admit it, in the back of your mind you know that the fastball that still leaves slugger's mouthes hanging open won't be, can't be, the same forever.

What do you do?

Many a superstar would collect autographed photos of Billie Jean King, Linda Jefferson, Judy Rankin, Princess Red Star, ad nauseum, tack them up on the wall and open The Brakette Bar and Grill, for Women Only.

That would be too easy for Joan Joyce.

She's diving headlong into the professional version of the world's sporting equivalent of hell, golf. A game where the best of shots can result in disaster and the worst of shots vanish into trees, sink into swimming pools or plug in two feet of mud.

And Joan Joyce, for whom the Sarah Coventry Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament is the fifth of her latest career, is no Ken Harre' or John Brodie. She hasn't been a dedicated weekend player, stepping up her practice for a shot at the tour.

Joyce bought her first set of clubs in 1963.

"I gave them to my father this summer, and they were almost brand new," she recalled the other day on the patio of Round Hill Country Club.

Joyce had used that first set of clubs only five-to-ten times per summer, squeezing in rounds between her job as a teacher in Connecticut and games with the semi-pro Raybestos Brakettes. Two years ago, the Women's Professional Softball league was formed and Joyce had the time to consider turning pro in a second sport.

Combining the two doesn't come easy.

"Every time I'd go out to play golf, I'd come back to batting practice popping the ball up like I was hitting a nine-iron," Joyce laughs. And the different swings are still a bigger stumbling block than any sand trap or bat-waving Amazon.

"That's absolutely the most important thing for me to work on," said Joyce, who will return for another season with the WPS' Connecticut Falcons in 1978. "Everything I've ever done in sports — softball, basketball, bowling — have all been with my right hand.

"I have to struggle to control my right side."

She continued, "In golf, your arms are the thing, you can't get 'wristy.' I'll hit the ball well off the practice tee, but when I get on the course I tend to get very quick."

Which goes back to the mental factor that destroys more athletic careers than astro-turf related knee injuries or drug addiction — lack of concentration.

"My mental approach to pitching and golf is the same, they're both a matter of concentration, really," said Joyce. Of course, the time to build that concentration is different.

"In softball, we're out on the field for hours before the game starts, on the tour you just warm up for a half hour or 45 minutes and go," Joyce pointed out.

Still, despite the adjustments, Joyce is ahead of her own time table. When she went to the LPGA qualifying school for the second time in July, she didn't expect to make the cut. She went for experience.

Before she departed Hartford, sportscaster Tony Edwards was surprised when Joyce said she'd have to be lucky to make the tour from the school in Toledo, Ohio.

"I had to be realistic, I'm usually pretty cocky when it comes to softball, I knew I'd have to make some putts," she recalls. "When I saw the golf course, I almost had a heart attack — it was like Round Hill, every time I took a club out of my bag, I had to consider out of bounds.

The hemmed in nature of Round Hill, where the Coventry tournament winds up today, has wreaked havoc with Joyce and the tour's other long hitters, Jo Anne Carner, Beverly Klass, Vicki Fergon.

Everywhere one swings there's a house, a row of cars or a set of tennis courts to avoid. Joyce listed her first round failings; a shot on 17 that would've kicked off the hill to the right for a weaker driver, but instead carried over and into a back yard, a green missed with a nine-iron on the seventh hole — "I should be shot" and a five-iron that ricocheted off a tree, setting up a bogey from what could have been an eagle.

"I should eat this golf course up," Joyce sighed, sweeping her had across the view of lush greenery and nouveau riche dwellings. "But, right now, when I hit a driver, there's no way I can be consistent. It's going to take time."

Don't bet Joan Joyce won't beat the clock.

Air Force nips Pacific, 15-13

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. — Sophomore quarterback Dave Ziebart passed for one early touchdown and the Air Force defense set up another, then held off a last half rally to defeat the University of Pacific 15-13 in college football Saturday.

The Pacific rally ended with a minute left in the game when quarterback Bruce Parker attempted a pass on a fake 50-yard field goal but the Falcons stopped the completion short of a first down.

Blalock challenges Austin

ALAMO — Debbie Austin is perfectly sane. Especially by her own standards.

Austin, who held a two-stroke lead after the second round of the $100,000 Sarah Coventry Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament at Round Hill Country Club, lost one of those strokes in yesterday's third round, but gratefully stayed atop the field of 60 golfers who survived the 36-hole cut.

After recording her third sub-par round of the tournament to drop nine-under and stave off a charge by increasingly hot Jane Blalock, Austin banged the funny bones of the gang in the press room.

"It's always nice to have a shot or two," Austin said in response to a question. "Anyone who says they don't want the lead is out of their mind."

Meet Amy Alcott, lunatic. Moments before, the serious 21-year old from Santa Monica, who is tied for third with first-round leader JoAnne Carner at five-under, had remarked that she was "right where (she) wanted to be" going into today's final round of the 72-hole tournament.

Austin, whose 70 was good enough to hold off blistering rounds by Blalock — her playing partner — a 69, and Carner, a 67, fell even with Blalock briefly on the back nine, but regained the lead with a birdie on the 499-yard, par-5, 18th hole.

A five-time winner this season, Austin hooked a 190-yard five-wood shot into the wind and was left with a pin-high chip shot from the right of the green. The pitch wound up some 30 inches from the cup, setting up the birdie four.

"I started to regain my composure on the back nine, even though Janey was playing super," said Austin, who had to do some mild scrambling on the way out. Off the first tee, Austin drove into the trees and claimed she was lucky to get out in front of the green from whence she got up-and-down for a par.

A 20-foot birdie putt on the second hole, however, "Made me think I could still have a good round," said Austin. All the while Blalock, who shot a 72 Thursday and a 70 Friday, was creeping closer on the leaderboard.

"It's good to get that close to Debbie, she's been running away from people," the slender Floridian said. Indeed. Austin has won three of the four tournaments in which she has taken an early lead this year.

Blalock, who carded four birdies and an eagle on the 440-yard 12th hole, added, "I feel good about my round, everything on this course is so darn tight. The character and nature of Round Hill has to bring up the better players.

Bears win, undefeated

COLUMBIA, Mo. — Quarterback Gary Graumann came off the bench in the final quarter and pitched a 13-yard pass to Jesse Thompson, lifting undefeated California to a 28-21 victory Saturday over Missouri.

The 5-foot-11 Graumann, a junior performing in his first collegiate football contest, rallied the Golden Bars after Missouri, which trailed 20-7 at halftime, took a 21-20 lead with 8:26 remaining on freshman quarterback Phil Bradley's oneyard sneak. 8

Using the bull-like rushes of fullback Paul Jones, Graumann steared Cal 75-yards in 12 plays and found Thompson, a reserve wide receiver, open for his payoff pitch.

His aerial, which represented Cal's only second-half score, atoned for earlier mistakes which enabled winless Missouri to bounce back.

A pass interception and 36- yard return by Terry Newman set up a two-yard Bradley pass to Leo Lewis which pulled Missouri, 0-3, within 20-14 in the third quarter.

Soon afterward, Golden Bears starting quarterback Charlie Young threw away a pitchout which thwarted a Cal threat and permitted the Tigers to go on top via Bradley's touchdown and Jeff Brockhaus' extra point.

Young had rifled a seven-yard scoring pass to tight end George Freitas, and Jones rambled 20 yards up the middle for a touchdown. The 6-foot-2, 225-pound Jones smashed for 202 yards on 35 carries to head a California attack also boosted by Jim Breech's field goals of 45 and 49 yards in the second quarter.

Missouri, before submitting, marched 54 yards in nine plays to the Golden Bear 18 following Graumann's winning pass with 2:50 to go.

There, however, the bid was spoiled when Bradley launched two incompleted passes, was tackled for a 13-yard loss while attempting his third and threw his lone interception of the afternoon on the game's final play.

Subbing for injured senior Pete Woods, the 18-year-old Bradley finished with 92 rushing yards on 26 carries, and added 93 yards on 9 for 25 passing. The Tigers' rushing leader was Earl Gant with a 101-yard pickup on 15 tries.

Graumann, who completed five of six aerials for 63 yards, first entered the game in the second quarter and threw four straight bull's-eyes for 51 yards to set up Jones' touchdown gallop. Breech then kicked his field goals to establish the commanding Cal lead at halftime, but afterward the Golden Bears offense bogged down until Graumann re-entered to spark the winning drive.

Cal, which amassed 454 yards in total offense to Missouri's 337, ran and passed for 255 of the aggregate in the first two periods, with Jones' runs accounting for 122 of the total on 20 tries.

Jones' number of rushes establised a Golden Bear school record. The outcome left Cal with a 3-0 mark for the first time since 1968, and Missouri with a 0-3 record for the first time since 1956.

Cards ripple Illinois

Benjamin's best day ever

PALO ALTO — A poised and polished Stanford offensive unit, taking advantage of every miscue by their opponents, overwhelmed a stubborn University of Illinois team 37-24 at Stanford Stadium here yesterday before a crowd of 50,500.

Overwhelmed is an accurate word to describe the Big Red Machine, offensively at least.

Two fumbles and one interception in the second quarter, were quickly transformed into 18 points by the potent Cardinal offense.

Star quarterback Guy Benjamin gave the best performance of his collegiate career. His pinpoint passes consistently found holes in the Illinois zone, completing 30 of 41 passes for 272 yards.

"I don't know if he's ever played better than that, but if he did, he had a great career behind him," Stanford head coach Bill Walsh said in praise of the 22-year old senior.

But Benjamin had to share the glory with the youngest member on the Stanford roster, 18-year-old freshman Darrin Nelson.

The youthful running back tallied 89 yards on 15 carries, and caught five passes for 42 yards.

Any salad oil company would do well to use him for promotional purposes. His light, 5-foot-9-inch, 170-pound frame slithered between the more massive Illinois defense as though he was a mixture ready to be poured over lettuce. As teammate wide receiver James Lofton put it, "He can turn a three-yard rush into twenty-five easily."

Nelson, slightly dwarfed by a gaggle of reporters, explained that, "Nobody taught me to move. I guess it's just natural."

He grinned shyly, but affiably, as he affirmed that he looks forward to the pressure situations, third-down-and-five for instance, that he is used for often. As far as he's concerned, it doesn't make much difference if he gets the ball via the air or handoff, to advance as far as possible.

The young Stanford defense was sorely tested by the powerful Illini running game, which rushed for 305 yards and 16 first downs.

However, in the usual Big Ten style, Illinois continued the running game even when they fell far behind. They threw only 15 passes during the entire game.

Coach Walsh said, "We have to improve in a lot of areas. Our defense played with a lot of enthusiasm and effort, but we had some breakdown mechanically. It's tough on both your offense and defense when the other team continues to make first downs."

The well-coached Cardinals are serious contenders for the Pac-10 championship. If the defensive problems can be solved, the Cardinals will be in the running for a Rose Bowl date.

Cosmos Play To 2-2 Tie

CALCUTTA (AP) — The Cosmos, champions of the North American Soccer League, and the Mohon Bagan club of Calcutta played a 2-2 tie in an exhibition match Saturday before a record crowd of 67,000.

The Cosmos took a 1-0 lead in the 18th minute when Carlos Alberto scored after taking a pass from Pele, the soccer great who retires next month. Within two minutes Shyam Thapa of Mohon Bagan tied the score.

Mohammad Habib scored to give the local club a 2-1 lead at halftime. Giorgio Chinaglia's second-half goal salvaged the tie for the Cosmos, who return to New York Sunday.

Alexander five-hits Rangers past A's

the Rangers, vieing for second position in the American League Western division picked up their 88th win against 67 losses with Alexander moving his record to 17-10 with the victory. Alexander pitched five innings of no-hit ball against Oakland as 2,036 watched.

Oakland scored a run in the second inning to give Vida Blue a 1-0 lead to work with while he no-hit the Rangers for the first four innings of play, yielding a single to Juan Beniquez in the fourth.

The A's demise came about in the sixth when Texas put three runs on the scoreboard with a double from Keith Smith a walk to Steve Hargrove, and an errant throw on a bunt bringing in the first run. Beniquez then doubled home Hargrove and Campy Campeneris for the game winning runs.

Oakland stopped Alexander's no-hit streak with ninth inning singles by Mitchell Page and Earl Williams.

Cowboys hang on, triumph

The most embarrasing mistake a football team can make became nothing more than a statistic when the dust cleared Friday night.

Livermore High handed the Manteca Buffaloes the first score of the game on Jim Vick's 25-yard return of a backfield fumble just three minutes gone, but the Cowboys dug out of the sandbox to score pair of third quarter TD's and post a 13-6 win in Livermore.

The East Bay Athletic League defending co-champs head into their league opener against upstart California next Saturday with a 2-1 record. Manteca slipped to 1-2.

With any amount of luck, the 'Pokes would be 3-0. They lost their season opener by giving up two TD's in the final six minutes to Castro Valley.

But, likewise, the Green and Gold could be 1-2 after almost suffering a letdown against the stubborn Buffaloes Friday.

Quarterback Bob O'Rourke drove the Valley Oak League mainstays down the Cowboy 11-yard line early in the fourth quarter with a first down, only to be thwarted by a crucial clipping call after halfback Brad Steele bulled to the one-yard line.

The 'Pokes held their stopped ground and the Buffaloes on downs.

Although the Buffaloes never got closer than the 40-yard line after that series, it was mainly a result of their own incompetency. O'Rourke tossed two interceptions — veteran defensive backs Steve Allen and Jeff Perry each grabbed one — and fumbled the ball on an errant pitch out.

The 'Pokes merely ran the clock out, although scaring the fans a little with some razzle-dazzle running plays in the minutes.

Livermore coach Ron Berg pointed out his team's desire to win, saying, "They remembered last year. We learned a lesson then. They could come back and beat us at any second. We had to play super pass defense."

Last year, the 'Pokes came out in the wrong end of a 14-13 verdict after giving up a winning TD with just second left on a desperation fly pass by the Manteca squad.

Livermore went into the locker room at halftime facing a 6-0 deficit. They failed to generate any consistent offense against a team which gave up seven touchdowns to Tracy High.

"I told them it was anybody's ballgame, and we've got to make every play count," said Berg.

, And from the toot of the second-half whistle, the Cowboys began to play.

Behind quarterback Naish Piazza's field attack, the Cowboys drove quickly to the Manteca eight. Running back Pete Martinez had a key 28-yard run in the drive, while Steve Culy had jaunts of eight and six yards.

But after a pair of dropped passes by Livermore and a four-yard run by Culy, the 'Pokes faced a fourth-and-goal from the four. Piazza scrambled and found Lester Jacob open near the flag, completing the pass for the tying TD on great efforts by both players.

Perry's PAT kick provided the go-ahead points.

After the Buffaloes fumbled the ball right back, Piazza waisted no time in bringing the 'Pokes from their own 37 to the Manteca 32, where he then ran 19 and 13 yards for a score. With 1:43 to go in the quarter, they had all the insurance needed. The PAT try was fumbled.

Berg noted the fine play of the offensive line and defensive backfield, and praised Piazza for his key runs. Although completing just three of 11 passes for 24 yards, Piazza was victimized by slippery hands. He more than made up for the nil passing by running for four of the 'Pokes' ten first downs.

As for Livermore's readiness against Cal, Berg admitted, "We've got a ways to go yet. We haven't changed anything since the first game of the season."

Livermore coach Ron Berg's prayers worked: Cowboys held off Manteca.

Who's rushing for Mats in win

BRENTWOOD — Granada High School finally got its running game together and may have found a replacement for graduated Vance Rushing as it outscored Liberty 26-20 here Friday night.

The Matadors, who had problems getting their running game going in the first two non-league games against Overfelt and Washington, rushed for 240 yards. Steve D'Ambra got 159 of those, 66 coming on a touchdown burst in the second quarter.

The underdog Lions fought Granada all the way, with the aid of some questionable calls by the referees.

Trailing 20-12 early in the fourth quarter Liberty got the ball on Granada's eight after a fumbled pitch out.

After two five-yard penalties against Liberty and and one against Granada the Lions were back on the nine. Quarterback Mike Gonzales then fired a nine-yard pass to Barry Schwltters on the sideline for the six-pointer.

After a penalty on the extra point Gonzales came right back and lofted a pass to tight end Perry Continente under two Matador defenders. Continente appeared to trap the ball but the refs gave Liberty the two-pointer.

That seemed to fire up Granada and the Matadors came right back on a six-play- 80-yard drive to win the contest.

Quarterback Steve Robison had runs of 15 and 14 yards in the drive and fired a 16-yard pass to Steve Waldera to put the ball on the Liberty 32. Three plays later D'Ambra bulled into the end zone from seven yards out.

Granada scored first in the contest on Dave Ridgewell's 11-yard run in the early in the second period. Robert Jamison kicked the extra point.

However, the Lions came back after Jim Tonne's punt hit Mike Nalty on the back and Liberty recovered on the one. Steve Nunn, the Lions' leading rusher with 50 yards in 16 carriesj cracked in from there. The two-point conversion attempt failed as Gonzales's pass was knocked down.

Ron King scored the other Matador TD on a 13-yard pass from Robison in the third period.

Matador coach Don Couch praised the efforts of his defensive team.

"They really did an outstanding job" he said. "All of them. I can't single out anybody."

The Matadors were particularly outstanding in the third quarter before Liberty scored its second touchdown. It took the Lions 10 plays to score before they could score on Nunn's three-yard run. Two Granada penalties elped them along.

Raiders are speaking not

PITTSBURGH — Here are some things it is not.

"It's not the whole season," says John Madden, coach, Oakland Raiders.

"It's not the Super Bowl," says Franco Harris, fullback, Pittsburgh Steelers.

"It's not Lynn Swann vs. the Oakland Raiders," says Lynn Swann, wide receiver, Steelers.

"It's not Swann vs. Atkinson," says George Atkinson, defensive back, Raiders.

What is it then?

Well, it's Oakland Raiders vs Pittsburgh Steelers, 4 p.m. Sunday, Three Rivers Stadium, national television, second week of the National Football League season, first clash of 1977 between two teams that have met in the playoffs the last five years, and the latest renewal of one of the most intense rivalries in sports.

"It'll be an exciting game," says Atkinson.

"It won't be dull," says Swann.

Those two weren't in harmony in the first game of last season when Atkinson delivered the straightarm to Swann's head the left him with a concussion.

That play ultimately led to an exchange of lawsuits between the Atkinson and the Steelers.

Atkinson lost his in court and the Steelers withdrew theirs. The only matter currently pending is Sunday's game.

It will be the first encounter for the two teams since the defending Super Bowl Champion Raiders defeated Pittsburgh last season in the AFC championship.

The Steelers, who beat the Raiders in the previous two AFC title clashes, played last year's game without injured running backs Franco Harris and Rocky Bleier.

The feeling among the Steelers is that last year's game would have been different if Harris and Bleier had been healthy.

Madden, who coached the Raiders when they lost a 1972 playoff game here on a freak pass deflection, dismisses such speculation.

"There's gonna' be a lot of talk, but I think we've all learned it doesn't make too damn much difference what is said," says Madden.

"It's really what happens, what the score was, who won the game."

Dublin wins it by the numbers

LAFAYETTE — If you like statistics, you'd have loved the Dublin High School football team Friday night.

The Gaels outgained their Acalanes Don hosts 208 yards to 49, ran 58 plays to Acalanes 43 and earned 14 first downs, 10 more than the Dons. So what?

So, if you listen to coaches and not numbers, you wouldn't have been too thrilled with the way either team performed during Dublin's 6-0 win in three-quarters full Jim Pinger Memorial Stadium. Faced with the kind of overwhelming statistical evidence provided above, few losing coaches comment unfavorably upon their conquerors.

Acalanes coach Don Madera apparently wasn't worried about any charges of "sour grapes."

"There was nothing impressive about Dublin," said Madera, whose hairstyle and attire with the years, but not his plain-spoken manner. "We beat ourselves, Dublin didn't. If we execute first, if we get there first, we win the ballgame."

It was Dublin which, after fumbling away the ball on the first play of the night, scored first. Saving the 59-yard, 11-play scoring drive with a 19-yard completion to Brad Taylor on third-and-18, quarterback Mike Hardy hit Dan Pearson in the end zone from six yards out with 5:27 to go in the first period.

That, as it turned out was the scoring.

"I saw a lot of inexperience out there," Dublin coach Wayne Re admitted. "I wish we could start the pre-season all over again, we need more playing time."

Ten Dublin penalties added up to a total of 100 yards and hampered the Gaels enough that Re said, "We should have been in there (the end zone) a couple more times."

Falcons speechless after 26-0 drubbing

Foothill High School head football coach John Lupoi shuffled towards the locker room Friday with a frustrated look on his face.

"My only comment is that we were beaten by a superior team," he said quite accurately.&

He was referring to the Falcons disappointing 26-0 defeat to one of the De Anza League's best team's this year, the Monte Vista Mus'ngs of Cupertino.

The Mustangs didn' waste any time in getting on the board. A mere three minutes into the game, the score was 7-0, the result of a 74 yard pass to tight end Scott Cowen from quarterback Scott Merizon.

The second quarter followed in the same style of play, with the Mustangs scoring again three minutes into the quarter on a three-yard rush by Cowen.

The Falcon defense was able to deny the Mustangs a couple of points by blocking the two conversion attempts.

Lupoi's reluctance to discuss the evening's activities, or lack of them, might have been caused from a severe lack of coverage from the offensive squad in protecting quarterback Doug Stevenson in the early part of the game.

Stevenson was forced to keep the ball on the ground throughout the first half.

It was a wise precaution, as the Mustang defense was climbing up Stevenson's front and back every time the ball was snapped.

The action got more lively though as the Falcons got more desperate for points in the second half. As his coverage increased, and as the Monte Vista penetration was stymied, Stevenson had more opportunities to try passing for the elusive touchdown.

The problem was that the Mustang coverage of the receivers had increased, and Stevenson was only able to complete 3-of-16.

After allowing three costly holes to open up for the Mustangs, the defense became more watchful in the second half. Although the Falcon Mustangs came within 10 yards or less of a touchdown several times, they met a desperate Foothill defense, which held them scoreless for the rest of the evening.

Run, run but Cal can't win

ORINDA — There's an old adage in football that says if a team can establish its running game early, its offense will pretty much take care of itself.

California High pretty much dispelled that notion Friday night as it fell to Miramonte, 26-10, despite Chris Miller's 146 yards rushing, including 135 in the first half.

The Grizzlies' passing attack, which had accounted for all four touchdowns in their win over San Lorenzo last week, never got off the ground. A tough Miramonte defense held Cal to only 55 yards passing, and picked off four Grizzly aerials.

Quarterback Tom Woodmansee had by far his worst game of the season for Cal, hitting only three of 13 pass attempts for 36 yards, and was intercepted three times. Quite a few of the incompletions and interceptions occured when Woodmansee was scrambling around under heavy pressure.

"We had trouble with our offense," said Cal coach Mike McGinnis. "Their line was tough, plus we had a number of different breakdowns on our side."

Cal capitalized on a Miramonte fumble at its own 17 to open the game's scoring. The Grizzly offense was stopped by the Matador's defense after having a first-and-goal setup on the seven. But Robert Perry's 18-yard field goal gave Cal a 3-0 lead.

The Grizzlies had the ball first-and-ten at their own 20 when Woodmansee handed to Miller on a routine off-tackle play to the left side. At first it looked as though Miller had been stopped for a short gain, but the senior fullback bounced to the outside and outraced all Miramonte defenders down the right sideline for Cal's only touchdown.

Miramonte scored its first touchdown on a 9-play, 72-yard drive. Keying the drive was Matador quarterback Ken Churich, who had been erractic in the first quarter. Churich completed passes of 15 and 23 yards to set up a two-yard touchdown run up the middle by sophomore halfback Craig Stokes.

Miramonte took the lead just before halftime when Churich hit Bud Tatum at the goal line for a touchdown with 16 seconds [illegible].

The second half w[illegible] all Miramonte, as Ca[illegible] was able to gain only five yards net rushing and 41 yards passing for a paltry total of 49 yards in total offense.

Miramonte picked up the final two touchdowns of the game in the fourth quarter. With 7:58 left halfback Brad Dilbeck burst through the left side of Cal's defensive line and romped almost untouched for 25 yards and a touchdown.

The final score came with just 1:08 left, after a 62-yard drive which again featured Churich's passing. Don Hardin came out of the backfield, took a short pass at the ten, and then bulled his way into the endzone to close out the scoring.

The loss left Cal's season record at 2-1.

MORAGA — Sophomore quarterback Terry Cottle ran for one touchdown and passed for another Saturday to lead St. Mary's to a 16-6 college football victory over Claremont-Mudd.

Bridge-to-Bridge

A bundle of fun for one who runs

SAN FRANCISCO — The huge clock above the World Trade Center struck 10 o'clock and the mass of 4,000 runners roared from anxiety for the start of the first ever Bridge to Bridge race.

That was the scene last Sunday as the sea of bodies and jogging shoes raced the 7.3 mile course from the Embarcadero to the Golden Gate Bridge via the Fishermen's Wharf. It was a hot and tiring run through the streets of San Francisco for the majority of runners. But, for 69-year old Walt Stack it was just another sprint much shorter than the 18 miles a day he's used to running.

"I just want to pass on some words of encouragement for all those runners who came out here to have a good time," Stack said at the start of the race. "Don't let all those hotshots who think they can buzz by you get you down. If you can make it three miles, then you are in good enough shape to make it to the end."

And, Stack ought to know. He's run 30,000 miles in the past 12 years.

It was more of a picnic than a grit-your-teeth competition. Three times as many runners were in the Bay to Breakers race but co-sponsors , KNBR radio and City Sports Monthly had such prizes as television sets and track shoes waiting for those who crossed the line first.

Everyone who finished the sweat-dripping event was awarded a blue ribborn signifying first place in at least Mom's book.

From Karen Lustgarten's calisthenics to the jokes of Carter B. Smith and disc jockey cohort Mike Cleary, it was a funfilled seven miles. There were a couple pitfalls for sprained ankles, such as the cable car tracks along the wharf and a one-lane tunnel through the Presidio, but other than that it was a pretty straight and level course.

Some run-for-fun racers thought the Bay to Breakers was an easier course even though it was a half mile longer. This was probably due to the fact that once you conquered Hays Street hill in the Bay to Breakers, the rest was all downhill.

A false start by some 1,000 runners boggled officials who could not pick out the eager culprits who eventually got lost in the pack when the Jim Ryans and Marty Liquories caught up with them.

Some tried to gut it out prematurely as they rounded the homestretch for the Marina only to discover that the band was playing for those who had made the loop underneath the Golden Gate Bridge. There was an official waving a large red flag at the intersection of the two-way traffic. She was pointing toward the bridge shouting to the lane of slower runners, "You've only come five and a half miles."

It was a blessing in disguise to see her on the return trip. This time she was waving her flag and shouting, "One and a half miles to go."

The last stretch was a sandy jog along the shore until reaching the Marina where the fans formed a funnel marking the final 100-yard grassy stretch. It was a dead heat for about 2,000 of us — "57:40" said the timer.

Now there was only one thing left to do — find where the wife parked the car and go home to a hot bath.

Mustangs trample Menlo

MENLO PARK — The Monte Vista Mustangs simply overwhelmed the Menlo Knights here Friday afternoon in the proverbial game that was not as close as the score indicated.

The final count was 30-7 in favor of the Danville team, but for 14 penalties and a casual attitude the score could have been much worse.

The Knights, who came in third in the tough South Penisula Athletic League last year, aren't going to do that well this time around. Menlo has only 300 boys enrolled and though there are some good football players among them, there were just not enough to deal with the bigger Mustangs.

Monte Vista wasted no time getting on the board, taking the ball after the opening kickoff and marching 68 yards in nine plays for a score. Quarterback Bart Adams threw a perfect 23-yard pass to Steve Wright to culminate the drive and it was 7-0 with only 4:14 elapsed.

The Mustangs went 47 yards in four plays for the next score, with Adams slicing for 37 and then overcoming a 15-yard penalty to hit Brad Ingram for 25-yard TD. That made it 14-0 and the sky could have been the limit but it appeared the Mustangs got a trifle bored in the lovely pastoral setting and were just marking time until the game ended.

Menlo got on the board in the second quarter after a weak Mustang punt — typical of the Monte Vista punting all season long — and a 25-yard pass from Scott Finley to Rich Baikie put the ball on the one. Finley wedged in from there to make it 14-7.

A 38-yard third quarter run by John Pashby and a nine-yard sweep by Phil Bevis completed the Mustang touchdown tally but Craig Robinson, shaking off a second quarter ankle injury, kicked a 33-yard field goal with 2:03 left in the game to wrap up the scoring.

Monte Vista outgained Menlo 401 yards to 104, but that bulge should not be expected when the East Bay Athletic League season begins next week. Monte Vista's 2-1 preseason record is indicative of the solid football team that they are, but the easy romp over Menlo will not be repeated in 1977 unless San Ramon loses five more starters to injury.

Wolves win dog fight, wallop Alhambra 59-6

Lyle Setencich has a gift for understatement.

"We played fairly well tonight," the San Ramon football mentor said Friday after his Wolves had thoroughly beaten Alhambra High's Bulldogs, 59-6, at San Ramon.

"Our kids wanted to beat Alhambra in the worst way," he added.

That they did, what with SR quarterback Guy Houston impersonating Ken Stabler by hitting on 20 of 29 passes for 367 yards and three touchdowns, and the Wolves jumping out to a 28-0 lead at halftime.

Houston directed the San Ramon attack to an awesome 485 yards total offense, while Alhambra was held to 189 yards, including only 43 yards rushing.

Randy Huddleston tallied three TDs for the Lobos, including an 80-yard kickoff return.

San Ramon started the slaughter quietly when Houston fired the first of his three scoring bombs, a 20-yarder to Pat Lardo for a 6-0 lead, and later ran it to 12-0 when Houston scored on a one-yard keeper.

Mike Campbell led all receivers with seven catches for 186 yards, and included an 82-yard strike in the second period, while Pat Castelli outrushed the entire Alhambra backfield with 46 yards in eight carries.

The Pioneer defense added 11 points as Los Angeles quarterback Phil Duckworth twice was tackled in his iwn end zone for safeties and Marvin Marks intercepted a Duckworth pass and ran it back 13 yards for a touchdown.

Hayward improved its record to 2-0, while Los Angeles State droppEd to 1-2.

Also registering 100 mph times Sunday were England's Peter Gethin, 101.483.

Carner still fighting for lead

"It really should be interesting tomorrow, but I wouldn't dare guess what it will take to win," she said.

What it will take for fallen first round leader Carner is a pick-up of five strokes, something that can best be accomplished by a repeat of yesterday's 67.

Carner, chasing Judy Rankin for the LPGA money-earning lead, shot a 69 Thursday, only to fall off to a 78 Friday.

"I went home and finally decided I was probably just snapping the club back too fast," she explained. "I've been working for months on slowing down my backswing, but once I started speeding it up, I couldn't stop."

Carner continued, "My driver is a little too heavy, if I get too fast I can't control it." Taking a simple way out of the dilemna, Carner simply left the club in her bag on Round Hill's tight back nine yesterday, bringing it out only for a 325-yard swat on the 18th that belied her miserable Friday form. On her way to the 78, Carner had hit three (3) balls out of bounds.

"JoAnne's long enough to do that and shoot good golf," Austin admitted when informed of Carner's conservative startegy of three-woods and long irons off the tee. "This isn't her type of course, she's going to be a little shaky on the tee, I am too.

"This course makes you a little itchy when you stand on the tee," Austin added, "You just don't get up there and whack the hell out of it."

Not to say you can't whack the hell out of par.

49ers can expect boos

SAN FRANCISCO — The San Francisco 49ers are scoreless so far this National Football League season, along with four other teams who suffered opening game shutout losses.

But they can't expect their fans to be forgiving when they take the field for Sunday's home opener against the Miami Dolphins. They can expect to hear boos, just as they did in their last Candlestick appearance.

The futility of the 49er's offense was evident in the statistics in the 27-0 setback to Pittsburgh Monday night — 101 net yards in 55 plays, four pass completions in 18 tries. Counting exhibition games, the 49ers have gone four consecutive games without a touchdown.

"We've got to keep our hedas up," said quarterback Jim Plunkett, who was 3-for-13 passing before leaving the opening game.

"Our touchdowns are going to come," said Ken Meyer, the team's first year coach.

They don;t figure to come easily against the Dolphins, who shut out O.J. Simpson and the Buffalo Bills 13-0 last Sunday. Coach Don Shula's defense includes five first-year players.

Miami's offense gained just 184 148 yards on the rainy day in Buffalo but an interception and three fumble recoveries, including one by outside linebacker Kim Bokamper, the former San Jose State star, gave the Dolphins the opportunities they needed to score.

"This is the type of defense that will get better each week," said middle-linebacker Steve Towle who participated in 18 tackles.

Quarterback Bob Griese, wearing glasses this year, was bothered by the rain at Buffalo, along with three sacks by the Bills' defense. Clear weather is expected Sunday but the Miami offensive line, missing injured star guard Bob Kuechenberg, takes on 49ers' "Gold Rush" defense which led the NFL in sacks last season and registered three at Pittsburgh.

ABI panel expresses deep concern

Builders: Continuing governmental interference might lead to future are a housing catastrophe

By BOB NOREK
Business Editor

BERKELEY — In the future, the Greater San Francisco Bay Area will face a housing crunch. However, area builders say that crunch might become a housing catastrophe if current governmental trends of interference continue.

While builders gave a litany of factors that will curtail housing development and skyrocket the price of a future new home, governmental regulations were called the villain of the piece.

This week the Eastern Division of the Associated Building Industry of Northern Californa (ABI) sponsored by panel discussion on the effect of federal, state, regional and local planning efforts and regulatory measures on the industry and the home buyer.

Panelists were Emmett Clifford, California Builders Council president; Ted Fairfield, California Council of Civil Engineers president; Dennis O'Brien, ABI board chairman; and Bill Downing, Coalition of Labor and Business, Alameda and Contra Costa Counties (COLAB) secretary.

The spotlight of the Spenger's Fish Grotto program fell on the spectre of governmental interference and the growing trend of "Big Brotherism" in the area of free enterprise.

Clifford reviewed many of the new developments in federal, state, regional and local governmental regulations. He hit hard at the federal and state Urban Strategy plans which call for development or redevelopment of urban land before builders could build on new land in the surburbs.

Clifford said the state quota for new housing is 240,000 units each year for the next five years. The builders council executive added there is no way the building industry can meet that goal by developing urban areas.

Clifford called the Urban Strategy plan "unrealistic." However, Clifford said the industry had recently enjoyed "one small victory." Planners must now take into consideration the economic effects of planning decisions.

Fairfield said that government planners and authors of these new regulatory measures have "total lack of respect for what's going on in the home building industry."

The engineer told his audience the Bay area is going to be a guinea pig for all these "fun new rules" because both the Sierra Club and the Corps of Engineers are headquartered here.

Fairfield said based on all the new game rules of planning including the Urban Strategy plan builders will "enjoy a few fun years" trying to develop homes here.

O'Brien commenting on the urban plan said builders would be forced back to by-pass property to build. The ABI chairman said this land will be expensive to develop and the now traditional planning delays of up to two plus years will increase costs.

O'Brien said builders have enjoyed several tremendous years but hard times will be coming again because of the governmental restrictions. He urged more involvement in legislative action on all levels of government by members of the building industry.

Downing concurred with all the comments and warned that local government might be phased out in the future and "regionalism" would be the form of government.

The panel agreed that if these trends continued there would be fewer and more expensive homes here in the future.

Emmett Clifford, California Builders Council president, discussed current and future government regulations on the home building industry at the recent ABI Eastern Division meeting.

Shapell homes going like hotcakes

Just ten homes are left in Shapell Industries, Inc., famed Rancho Ramon Fairway series. according to Stan Cook, vice president of marketing and sales with Shapell.

"We don't expect these elegant, exclusive homes to last long," Cook stressed. They're unique, in that they are a rare commodity these days. They spell prestige and privacy to be enjoyed by a select few. Most of our buyers want a showcase of a home that's off the beaten path. And this is definitely a strong characteristic of a Rancho Ramon Fairway home."

The few homes left offer quality workmanship and creative design. As a country club type home, special emphasis has been given to positioning windows and yard access to make the most of the fairway view.

Rancho Ramon Fairway series homes have three, four and five bedrooms with two and three baths and three car garages and a wide range of extras included in the base price. Square footage ranges from 1,800 to more than 3,00 square feet.

Cedar shake and Spanish tile roofs serve to enhance the country club effect, so popular with better home buyers. A ceramic tile foyer opens into luxurious living space. All rooms have wall to wall carpeting. Each home has custom fireplaces and the master bedrooms feature spacious walk-in closets. Kitchens are equipped with the latest in convenient equipment, including two ovens, one self-cleaning and one microwave, a dishwasher and disposal.

Don Garlington led the activity with slaes of over $600,000. He was followed by George Perata, Carolyn Wolf and Fred Staedel. They each had over $500,000. Mark Moyers, Myrna Stone and Norm Barbin each exceeded $400,000 in sales.

Tamarack in Fremont dubbed as popular

Model homes at Tamarack, a new Fremont subdivision being built by Shapell Industries of Northern California, Inc., are being decorated and are now open for sales.

"Sales began at the end of August," said Stan Cook, Shapell's vice president of marketing and sales, "and we expect Tamarack to be enormously popular. It will feature some of the finest and most popular floor plans and amenities available on the market today."

"And, in addition, Tamarack boasts a very attractive location," continued Cook. "It is close to schools, shopping, central employment areas, freeways and Bart. And yet it's far enough from urban congestion to be quiet and serene."

In all, some 136 single-family homes will be built at Tamarack.

Four floor plans, ranging from 1,750-to 2,800-square feet in size will be offered, and are preview priced from $92,950. One-and two story and tri-level models will be available, with three, four or five bedrooms and two and one-half or three baths. One plan will feature a huge completed bonus room .

Featured in the homes are ceramic tile entry, indoor laundry area in most plans, family room with sliding glass doors, custom designed wood burning fireplace, sunken living room, formal dining room, optional wet bar, microwave and self-cleaning ovens and a spacious master bedroom suite.

Shapell's 13-point energy conservation program will be included in all homes.

To reach Tamarack, take Freeway 680 to the Mission-Hayward offramp. Continue on Mission to the models.

B of A's new solar home plan

San Francisco — Bank of America announced today it is introducing a Solar Energy Financing Program for California homeowners.

Under the new program' which is part of the bank's home improvement loan package, qualified customers will be able to obtain financing for the installation of solar hot water heating, swimming pool heating, home space heating and cooling.

"Rising energy costs from traditional sources have made solar energy more attractive and many systems are of sufficient quality for us to offer financing for them," said J. A. Carrera, executive vice president and head of the bank's California Division. "In introducing this program, we hope to encourage the development and installation of sloar energy systems. We're interested in initiating sound lending practices to help bring solar energy into the mainstream."

Builder's boost cost of a new $80,000 home

By BOB NOREK
Homes Editor

OAKLAND — Home buyers can say good-bye to the $80,000 home, according to representatives of the home building industry.

That $80,000 upper middle class home dream is gone. Tomorrow the dream might cost $90,000 plus and next week the price tag may climb more than $100,000, builders said at this week's Young Home Builders seminar on the $80,000 home.

Americans, especially Bay area residents, in the future can look foward to smaller homes, small lots, increased building density, almost communal living and higher prices.

That was the combined opinion of the seminar speakers as they took apart and put together the session's topic.

Gary Ryness, principal, The Ryness Company, panville, the seminar's YHB Seminar Storydinner speaker said, "Someone should design a decal for the $80,000 home because it's a disappearing species."

Ryness said home prices will continue to go up because of governmental fees, labor, land, material costs and delays in product production because of increased governmental hearings and regulations.

The marketing specialist added that builders will have to re-educate the prospective home buyer that the smaller home is of value too!

Ryness said the building industry could take a lesson from the auto industry which has, in his opinion, been successful in selling the concept that "less is more."

Ryness said the keep to successful marketing of the smaller, but more expensive home of the future is innovative design concepts.

Frank Seronello, an Oceanic Financial Corp. executive, told his panel audience at the Hilton here, that the condominium conversion would be the starter home of the future.

Seronello said that in Contra Costa County in the last five years more than 1,100 conversions have taken place. He commented conversions could be a solution for a sector of the predicted housing crunch.

Bank of America Real Estate Loan Department executive Jay Bokman Jr. discussed the shortage of available building land and the governmental emphasis of returning to the urban areas to develop new housing.

He suggested builders in the future could recycle older homes for new home buyers. Bokman said with future energy conservation measures, many older homes would have to be almost rebuilt before they could be resold under government standards. Planner Hal Joseph of George S. Nolte & Associates said in the future developers would not receive building permits for their projects but actually licenses to build.

Joseph foresaw more regional control of land uses and smaller living units and a mix of housing styles in one development.

Randy Smith of the Harold Smith Co. of Walnut Creek, custom home builders, believed there is hope in the future for the "flexible builder." Smith says the successful builders of the future will be the innovative land developers.

The home builder also added that in his company's field there would always be a market for the luxury custom home.

Great American Homes President William Schworer said that considering all the factors of the home building game now and in the future the key is "make it smaller."

But as all the panelists said, no matter what size home was built the consumer of the future will be paying more.

Chet Allen reveals six hints

Walnut Creek — Real estate offers 11 areas of specialization which can result in big money for the realtor, according to a successful real estate syndicator.

Chet Allen, president of Chet Allen, Inc., told members of the Contra Costa Board of Realtors that srveral of these areas are virtually untapped by realtors.

Allpn said these areas of specialization are residential sales, land sales, conversions, industrial land, ranches and farms, and office buildings.

Allen told his breakfast meeting audience that money could be made six ways in each of the special areas.

"An untapped area with big money is selling new homes for developers and home builders."

Allen said with two million housing starts a year (an $80 billion business based on the average of $40,000 per unit) the 3 per cent commission in this sales area is $2.4 billion.

How to keep the cost of running a home down to a walk.

With energy prices continuing to rise, the best way to keep costs down is to buy a home that uses less energy. Like one that displays the Energy Conservation Home sign, which tells you that a lot of energy-saving features are built into the house, whether it's new or remodeled.

These days, new homes have to meet local, State and Federal (FHA) insulation and weatherstripping requirements. But Energy Conservation Homes go a lot further. Each has a combination of special, built-in energy-saving features, such as dishwashers with "off" switches for the drying cycle; water-saving faucets, toilets and showerheads; pilotless ignition gas ranges; energy-efficient water heaters; fluorescent lighting; insulated hot water piping; set-back furnace thermostats; or clogged-filter indicators on heating or cooling systems.

The features included in each home will vary, but here's how the program works. PG&E awards points for each installed conservation feature. And builders must achieve a minimum of 50 points to qualify a dwelling as a PG&E Energy Conservation Home, and to display the sign.

Because so many people are demanding energy conservation, builders are beginning to get the message.

The time for careless consumption of energy is over. It's too expensive, and we can't risk running out of it. And a good time to make sure energy costs don't eat you out of house and home, is when you buy.

PG and E

No one can afford to waste energy.

Construction takes a dive

SAN FRANCISCO — Building activity dropped substantially in July when compared to the good months that preceeded it, according to a construction industry spokesman.

Residential permit value in the nine-county Bay Area declined 26 per cent and non-residential went down 34 per cent. To put these figures in prespective, both declines reflect the general dwonward trend for the year in these counties but also exaggerate it.

When the first seven months of 1977 are compared with a similar period the year before, the drop in residential building is only 9 per cent and for non-residential , 3 per cent , he said.

Despite these disappointing figures for the area generally, activity continued strong in some specific counties.

Considering residential figures alone, the City of San Francisco resgistered an 18 per cent gain in permit value (the value of single-family permits almost doubled) while Alameda recorded a 4 per cent increase.

Neither of these localities had large tract developments of any significant dollar value.

San Mateo had a drop of 20 per cent in residential activity while Santa Clara's figures remained almost constant, kept up by several projects in San Jose ranging from $223,000 for five units to $1.6 million for 50 units; San Jose also recorded a multi-housing permit for 17 buildings with 272 units, amounting to $4.2 million.

Home sales still boom in nation

WASHINGTON, D.C. — New records continue to be set in sales of existing (resale) homes, the National Association of Realtors reports, with sales of existing single-family homes at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 3,510,000 units in July.

In releasing the report, Kenneth J. Kerin, director of the association's Department of Economics and Research, said:

"This is 1.2 percent above the old record set late last year and 18.6 percent above the July 1976 pace. Nationally, there is no evidence that resale activity will slacken. Sales are expected to continue strong through the remainder of this year and well into 1978."

Sales were brisk in every part of the nation except for the Western region, Kerin said, where last year's overheated market finally has cooled.

New records were set in the Northeast and South, and the North Central region matched its previous record. In the West, by contrast, July sales tumbled by 11.7 percent from the June figure to 530,000 on an annualized basis.

In other regions, the number of sales transactions, and the seasonally adjusted annual rate of increase over June totals were: Northeast, 570,000, 7.5 percent; North Central, 1,010,000, unchanged; and South, 1,400,000, 9.4 percent.

Home prices continued to rise, the report says, with the median sales price of an existing single - family home advancing by $300 to $43,700. This represents a 12.3 percent rise only July 1976, attributable in large part to the price inflation in the Western region during the period.

For more than a year, the report reveals, prices in that region have been rising by more than $1,000 a month. The July median of $59,600 in the West was 26.8 percent higher than that of July 1976.

In other sections of the nation, price increases were less dramatic, according to the report. The Northeast median price of $44,400 was only 3.7 percent higher than that of a year ago. In the North Central region, the $37,000 median represents a 10.4 percent advance, and the median price in the South rose by 11.0 percent to $41,300.

Not surprisingly, the report says, the steady rise in home prices has been accompanied by a continuing drop in the proportion of resale transactions occurring in the lower - and middle - price ranges.

Although five years ago 90.2 percent of all single - family resales were priced under $50,000, this July only 60.6 percent of the sales were in that range.

Base 1978 manufacturer's suggested retail price including dealer preparation and required California emission equipment. Tax, license and destination charges not included.

For 1978... Chevy Chevette announces a decrease in price and an increase in value.

A lot more standard

Our nifty 2-door Chevette Hatchback is a lot niftier. Because we now include in California eighteen standard features at no extra charge.

Features that most people want in a car. Like a quality-built Delco AM radio, a 1.6 Litre engine, white stripe tires and wheel trim rings. Even swing-out rear windows.

All things considered, the new '78 2-door Chevette Hatchback is considerably more car.

And a very considerable value.

2-door Chevette Hatchback

$411 value

Last year on Chevette we added $200 worth of equipment at no extra charge in the California Buyer's Bonus.

For 1978 we're adding an additional $211 worth of standard equipment at no extra charge.

And here's the really good news. Based on a comparison of manufacturer's suggested retail prices, we still kept the price of the 1978 Chevette 2-door Hatchback $195 below what last year's model would have cost with the same equipment.

Amazing. More Chevette for less money.

And a total value of $411 worth of standard equipment at no extra charge.

There's a brand-new Chevette, too. A 4-door Hatchback with two more doors, a roomy rear seat and all the new standard features except for the swing-out rear windows.

In fact, it has more rear seat leg room than the 1977 Toyota Corolla 4-door, the 1977 Datsun B-210 4-door—even the 1977 Honda Civic Wagon.
